TRIES TO KILL SELF IN SUBWAY

William C. Taat, a young man from New York, jumped in front of a north-bound train at Essex street, at 9:20 to-day and was hurled by the car against the wall of the tunnel, sustaining serious injuries, but escaping death.

Taat, who is thirty-two years old, and gave his address as No. 2610 Broadway, New York, said he wanted to kill himself because his family had been hounding him.

A peculiar feature of the tragedy was that the police who first reached the scene and the railroad station men thought the man was dead when they picked him up and carried him into a small room off the station. They covered him up and notified the morgue.

Thought Him Dead.

Some one went in to look at the supposed dead man and discovered he was breathing.

"Here," he cried, "this man's not dead. Get a doctor."

Immediately the Relief Hospital was phoned and the injured man was hurried off to the hospital.

At the hospital it was discovered that the toes of the man's right foot had been cut off, his knees bruised, and there were a number of cuts on his head. He was not placed on the dangerous list and it is believed he will recover.

Patrolman William Hardigan of the Lagrange street station had a talk with Taat in the hospital. After getting his name and address, the policeman asked:

Hounded by Family.

"When did you get here?"

"I cam from New York to Boston and reached here to-day. I went to a hotel and registered and then started out to commit suicide."

"Why did you want to kill yourself?"

"My family have been hounding me for months. They claimed that I had an illness that is incurable. I went to a physician and he said it was untrue. The doctor said I was all right. I told this to my people, but they still persisted in the persecution."

Patrolman Hardigan said that Taat seemed to be rational enough when he told his strange story.

No one saw the man jump in front of the car, so far as the police could ascertain. It was supposed he was hit by the farther corner of the car and thrown against the side wall. He was picked up opposite the forward part of the second car.

MRS. SLOAN LEAVES $2,000,000 ESTATE

PITTSFIELD, June 7.—The will of Mrs. Adela Berry Sloan, late of Lenox, Elberon, N. J., and New York, was filed in the Probate Court here. The estate is estimated at $2,000,000. "Wyndhurst," in Lenox, goes to Evelyn Sloan, a daughter. The property at No. 883 Fifth avenue, New York, is given to John Sloan, Jr., a son. William Sloan, a son, receives $400,000. The rest of the estate is divided between the children, one-half going to Evelyn and one-quarter each to the sons, who are named executors.

SMUGGLERS READY TO TAKE SENTENCE

Goodman Phillips of Roxbury and George M. B. Gardinier of Wellfleet, who were convicted recently in the United States District Court of conspiracy to smuggle Chinamen into this country from Jamaica, have given notice that they waive their thirty days' stay of sentence, which was granted by Judge Dodge for the purpose of allowing them to prepare a bill of exceptions for a new trial. The two men will be sentenced as soon as Guy A. Ham, their counsel, who was recently taken ill, is sufficiently recovered.

Protest Against 50-Year Monopoly by the Elevated

Delegates to the United Improvement Association's meeting to be held this evening at the City Club will be called upon to take action regarding the proposed fifty-year lease of Boston's street railways, with their subways and tunnels, by the Boston Elevated Company.

Expert railroad men, who have the interest of Boston at heart, are opposed to such a long lease—a contract that would tie up the transit facilities of Boston for almost two generations.

Business men and others who are interested in this proposition should get into communication with the delegates to the meeting to-night and urge the importance of a vote by the association against the bill in the Legislature providing for the long lease.

Thinking citizens of Boston will readily see the impropriety of giving such an important privilege for so long a time, regardless of the advantages accorded by the railroad company in the lease.

ELIOT TO GIVE ORATION ON 4TH

Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, to-day accepted the invitation of Mayor Fitzgerald to be the orator for the Fourth of July exercises in Faneuil Hall. President Eliot, himself the son of a Boston Mayor, is one of the most distinguished speakers that has ever served the city as Independence Day orator. Master Fred Daly, the son of Representative George T. Daly of Ward 12, will read the Declaration of Independence from the balcony of the Old State House.

ANOTHER FIRM YIELDS TO BOTTLERS' STRIKE

Coleman & Keating of No. 102 Sudbury street, one of the eight firms signing the original injunction application against the Bottlers and Drivers' Union when its strike of March 30 was pending, has withdrawn from the Employers' Association and settled with the strikers. Its men are back to work to-day under a signed contract calling for an increase of $1 a week, Saturday half-holidays, during the six Winter months, and straight union conditions. This makes the second concern to break away from the bosses' combination since the injunction proceedings were instituted.

MRS. CABOT WILLS HUSBAND $380,000

Mrs. Amy Hemmenway Cabot of Milton, by the terms of her will allowed to-day in the Norfolk Probate Court, at Dedham, leaves to her husband, Louis Cabot, her entire estate of $380,000. Her husband was named executor, but upon his refusal to serve, Henry B. Cabot of Brookline was appointed. He filed both bonds of $600,000.

FINE TRIO $70 FOR BEATING STUDENTS

HANOVER, N. H., June 7.—Mistaken identity was given in court to-day as the reason for the assault on H. C. Bond of Malden, E. C. Castle of Quincy, Ill., and W. P. Salmon of Woburn, Dartmouth students, early Sunday morning. H. O. Willard, Austin Kibby and C. E. Kendall of Hanover pleaded guilty to assault and paid fines aggregating $70 in Police Court. Carl Gibson, the alleged ringleader, is missing.

WILSON GUEST ON RECIPROCITY CRUISE

DETROIT, Mich., June 7.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson is the guest of honor on the annual cruise of the Detroit Board of Commerce—termed the "Reciprocity Cruise" this year—which left Detroit this afternoon. The Board of Commerce members, together with Secretary Wilson, will champion the reciprocity agreement on board the steamer and at the meetings scheduled in the cities of northern Michigan.

VESSEL AFIRE OFF HOLLAND

ROTTERDAM, June 7.—A steamship is reported afire off the coast of Holland. The vessel is believed to be the Oxonian, a trans-Atlantic freighter of the International Mercantile Marine Company. Advices received here state that the burning vessel has four masts and a pink funnel. The stack of the Oxonian is yellow, but at a distance, and under the glare of the flames, the color might easily be mistaken for pink.

M'LAUGHLIN FREES FIRST DEFENDANT

In the same courtroom where for many years he tried cases for the government John D. McLaughlin to-day appeared in the role of presiding judge. Judge McLaughlin presided for the first time in the Criminal session of the Suffolk Superior Court since his recent appointment to the bench by Governor Foss. Judge McLaughlin's first official act was to discharge Michael Downey, who was charged with vagrancy. In the lower court Downey was sentenced to the State Farm. He appealed. The only witness against him to-day was Police Officer Hugh O'Neill. After O'Neill had testified Judge McLaughlin said, "There isn't sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in finding this man guilty." He then discharged the jury.

CHILDREN RECEIVE $1,000,000 ESTATE

The million dollar estate of Mrs. Fannie C. Adams of Quincy will be divided equally between her three children, Charles F. Adams, 2d of Concord, Arthur Adams of Quincy and Mrs. Abigail Homans of Boston, according to the terms of her will which was allowed in the Norfolk Probate Court at Dedham to-day. The property comprises $400,000 real estate and $800,000 in personal property. Charles F. Adams 2d and Arthur Adams are named as executors.

CAMBRIDGE BILL SIGNED BY FOSS

Governor Foss to-day signed the Cambridge new city charter bill. The bill provides for government by a commission of five, elected for three-year terms, the abolition of party designations, and for a preferential system of voting and the initiative, referendum and recall. The charter must be accepted by a majority of the voters of the city of Cambridge at the next State election in order to take effect.

The Governor was urged at a public hearing which he gave yesterday to a number of Cambridge Democrats to veto the bill. He was told that if he allowed it to become law he would lose a number of Democratic votes in Cambridge.

6 DIE IN WRECK ON NEW HAVEN

FAIRFIELD, Ct., June 7.—Six men were killed and a dozen others injured in one of the worst freight wrecks that ever occurred on the New Haven Railroad, when four trains were piled up in the darkness of early morning at Lockwood's Crossing, half a mile west of here. Of the injured it is believed four will die.

THE DEAD:

William Laurie, engineer, Hartford.

Robert Gates, New London, fireman, scalded to death.

Robert Beach, New London, engineer.

—— Hoffman, brakeman.

WILL PROBABLY DIE:

Charles Fox, New Haven, fireman, ribs broken and internal injuries, scalp wounds, at Bridgeport Hospital.

Oliver Hauff, conductor, No. 304 North High street, Mount Vernon, legs, right arm broken, internally injured, at St. Vincent Hospital, Bridgeport.

Daniel Hannon, No. 71 Russell street, Merrick, Mass., brakeman, cut and bruised; at St. Vincent's Hospital, Bridgeport.

Michael Walsh, No. 383 East One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street, New York, trainman, internally hurt, ribs broken; at St. Vincent's Hospital, Bridgeport.

The finding of the body of the fireman of the second New York freight train buried beneath the wreckage and an unidentified body makes the number of dead six.

The tracks were so badly blocked by the wreckage that all of the Boston-bound trains from New York were delayed four and five hours. The mails in the greater part of New England were late because of the accident.

It was said by railroad men to-day that the wrecking of four trains at the same spot was without precedent.

Crash Into Wreckage.

The accident took place shortly after midnight. The spot where it happened is isolated. There were no lights there, and after the first two trains crashed together it appears that the other two dashed into the debris before they could be warned of the danger ahead.

A tragic spectacle was presented following the wreck. The men had nothing to guide them in exploring the derailed and smashed cars except their lanterns. The cries of the injured were heard under the piles of broken wood and twisted iron and there were but few uninjured of the train crew to render help.

The fact that all of the available help was necessary to look after the injured when the first two trains crashed together was probably the reason that the third and fourth trains were not signalled of the danger.

When the third train crashed into the wreckage and then the fourth thundered into the great heap of smashed cars the railroad men on the scene were in despair.

It was then that they realized that they would have to take prompt measures to prevent any more accidents, especially as some of the passenger trains were due and were in danger of adding to the horror of the scene.

Boiler Blows Up.

The trains in the wreck are extras No. 312 on track three, west-bound; the Springfield and Harlem fast freight on track three, west-bound, and extras No. 280 and 338, east-bound on track two.

Train men figured that a car on No. 280 jumped the tracks and as the train stopped No. 338 crashed into it, throwing the wreckage on to track No. 3, into which train No. 312 crashed, the Springfield and Harlem freight running into the rear of that.

Immediately following the collision the boiler of one of the engines exploded, setting the wreckage on fire. This was put out by the local fire department.

An ambulance and seven physicians were sent from Bridgeport and aided the local physicians in caring for the wounded, who, as fast as they were taken from beneath the cars, were sent to Bridgeport hospitals.

GEN. F. I. MADERO, WHO ENTERED CITY OF MEXICO TO-DAY

MADERO ENTERS CITY OF MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, June 7.—Amid the scenes of ruin and death caused by the earthquake, General Francisco I. Madero, Jr., leader of the successful revolution against Diaz, was welcomed at 10 o'clock to-day to the seat of the government he and his troops had overturned.

The earthquake dimmed the wild enthusiasm of his welcome, but his greeting was cordial.

Madero spent the night at San Juan del Rio, eighty miles from this city. He retired early, somewhat fatigued and almost without voice as the result of speechmaking of the last few days.

Soldiers guarded the eight cars of the train. A few yards ahead stood the pilot train, with 100 armed men aboard. Behind was a locomotive and three cars, bearing 300 more soldiers, who began trailing the party yesterday, as additional protection.

It was felt aboard the train that if any of the plots rumored within the last two weeks were to be carried out, the stretch of railroad over which the train must travel today would be the one chosen. Senor Madero himself has smiled at rumors of plots, and sat happily with his family in his private car.

FIND MAN DEAD IN "WILDERNESS"

A well-dressed man, apparently sixty years old, was found dead about 7 o'clock to-day near Glen Road, West Roxbury, in a tract of land locally called "The Wilderness." By his side lay a small vial that had apparently contained carbolic acid. There was nothing on the body by which it could be identified and the police took it to the City Hospital Morgue.

The man was five feet six inches tall and weighed about 170 pounds. He was smooth shaven, of light complexion and had gray hair and eyes. His clothing consisted of a dark gray suit, gray cap, tan stockings and black lace shoes, striped outing shirt, brown spotted tie and white turn-down collar. His upper teeth were false.

HUNDREDS KILLED IN MEXICO CITY

180 Soldiers Killed by Terrific Shock Which Causes Ruin in City of Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, June 7—An earthquake that shook this city and a large section of Mexico, killing 180 soldiers in one sot, hurled buildings to the ground and terrorized thousands of citizens who took it as a visitation of wrath from an angry Almighty Power, wakened Mexico from sleep at about 4:30 o'clock this morning.

CREATES PANIC AMONG FESTIVAL CROWDS.

So spectacular was the visitation that it was a long time before residents of Mexico City could realize what caused the catastrophe.

The sky was illuminated with vivid flashes of lightning. Occasionally there was a dull roar of thunder, which sounded like the firing of distant cannon. Sharp tongues of streaked flame darted through the sky.

The trembling of the earth, which was shaking the more unstable buildings from their foundation, the crashing of tumbling chimneys and reeling walls, the rumbling of the thunder and the streaks of fire that darted from the clouds created a panic among great crowds of people who had already begun to gather to participate in a fete in honor of Francisco Madero, the revolutionary hero.

Coming upon this city as it did, after months of terror resulting from the uprising of insurrectos and the downfall of Diaz, it was little wonder that hundreds of people believed that the end of the world was at hand.

Men and women ran shrieking through the streets, crying out that the city was to be consumed by fire.

"It is the vengeance of God," they cried, "for driving out Diaz! Beware! Beware!"

180 Killed in One Place.

So great is the excitement here that nothing like a complete estimate can be made of the number of victims. The fact that 180 men lost their lives in one spot indicates that the disaster may prove one of the greatest that has ever been experienced in Mexico.

It is known that the number of injured will mount up into the hundreds. Whether the force of the earthquake was more severe in Mexico City than in some of the other cities and towns is not known. It may be that some of the other towns and cities in the State have been completely destroyed, but any news as to what has happened outside of Mexico City has failed to reach here as yet.

The soldiers who lost their lives were crushed by the falling walls of their barracks. Their lives went out while they slept. There was no warning whatever of their impending fate.

First Shock Most Severe.

Many other buildings collapsed and it is believed that their victims will figure up into the hundreds. The police and military forces of Mexico City and a large force of volunteers began at once to explore the debris in search of the killed and injured.

The first shock was the most severe. It was felt at 4:28 a. m. But for nearly two hours the earth's surface continued to rock as though one was on the deck of a small steamer in the open sea with a hurricane raging.

The first shock lasted about 15 seconds. The city rocked as though it were in the hands of a mighty giant. Men and women were hurled from their beds to the floor. When they rose to their feet they staggered about as though under the influence of wine.

Big Crowds to See Madero.

Because of the welcome to Madero which was under way thousands of people had poured into the city who could not find houses in which to sleep. They were accommodated in the parks and in the streets.

These visitors, many of whom were uneducated peons who had been asked to the capital to take part in the celebration in honor of the successful revolution, were almost crazed by the unexpected and startling manifestations of nature.

These people, awakened by the sharp undulations of the earth, ran through the streets crying out wildly and bewailing their fate. The entire city was soon awakened. People poured from their houses and joined the frenzied throng in the streets.

SHOCKS RECORDED WERE MOST SEVERE FOR MANY YEARS

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The seismograph at Georgetown University this morning recorded the most severe earthquake shocks in the history of the observatory. The tremor began at 6:07 a. m. and continued till 7:10 a. m. The longest shock lasted eight minutes.

Scientists at the observatory estimated the distance from Washington of the shocks to be between 4,000 and 5,000 miles. They could not give an opinion as to the location of the earthquake, but said that somewhere thousands of miles away a great cataclysm has occurred.

TILT ON WRIT IN PLASS CASE

At the trial in the United States Circuit Court to-day, before Judge Dodge, of Norman Plass, Charles H. Brooks and John I. Trathagan, charged as officers of the Redeemable Investment Company with using the mail in a scheme to defraud, Postoffice Inspector Charles H. Clarahan was called to the witness stand. John P. Feeney, counsel for the defendants, strenuously objected to Clarahan's being used as a witness on the ground that he had wrongfully entered the offices of the Redeemable Investment Company at 85 Devonshire street, on last October 13, and had illegally taken from the premises all the books, letters and other documents.

Feeney called the attention of the court to a case known as "Adams vs. State of New York," in which, he maintained, it was held that a government agent could not testify under those circumstances. Pending an investigation of that case, Judge Dodge allowed Clarahan to testify.

Judge Krum of St. Louis, senior counsel for the defense, claimed that U. S. Commissioner Hayes had no authority to issue a writ such as was issued by the federal authorities when they conducted the raid on the premises of the company and that consequently the writ was void.

Judge Dodge admitted the writ in evidence, however. The writ was then read to the jury by U. S. District Attorney French, and in it was set forth the order that the officer in charge of the company appear forthwith and produce all the books and papers concerned.

Clarahan in testifying, said that he and other federal officers had assisted George B. Graff who was in the office of the company on the day of the raid, and in charge there, to carry books and papers to the Federal Building.

Queen Mary Presented With Gift by Namesakes.

LONDON—The coronation gift to Queen Mary from her namesakes in the British Dominions was presented to her in Buckingham Palace to-day by the members of the executive committee of the fund. It takes the form of a check for £12,400, and was handed to the Queen by Lady Mary Trefusis, president of the fund. A new and striking feature will mark the great ceremony of the coronation. The standards of India, Wales and of the British Dominions beyond the seas will be borne into Westminster Abbey in addition to those of England, Scotland and Ireland and the union standard.

American Telephone the Best.

LONDON—Americans who have had experience with British telephones need not be told how they compare with their own, but there is hope that Western methods may result from the recent journey of British officials who went to America to study the methods employed there. Their report, which has been submitted to the chiefs of the telephone system is likely to be fruitful. Engineer Purves, one of the investigators, admits that American telephone engineers lead the world.

Amundsen's Polar Expedition.

LONDON—The first account of Captain Amundsen's South Polar expedition is printed in the Times today under date of February 9. On that date Amundsen was about to start southward to establish his main depot eighty degrees south, hoping to reach eighty-three degrees south and establish a smaller depot before the darkness set in in the early autumn.

INQUIRY INTO DANVERS DEATH

Mrs. Niles G. Freeman of No. 64 Lowell street, Lynn, whose husband died under mysterious circumstances at the Danvers Insane Hospital, is in a pathetic condition to-day. The result of the autopsy performed at that institution shows that Freeman died from softening of the brain and other bodily disorders. The doctors admit, however, that the man was covered with scratches, his right foot injured and two teeth were missing.

District Attorney Henry C. Attwill of Essex County will investigate some of the facts in connection with Freeman's death. He has not yet received any official communication from the Danvers authorities about this case, but expects to to-day. Mrs. Freeman declares that her husband's death is a mystery, but she states that being without means, she is unable to make a proper investigation.

The body will not be brought home, as she has no funds to bury her husband. The Danvers officials say that they will take charge of the remains. Weeping bitterly and sitting by her two small children, the victim's widow cannot be comforted.

From the Danvers Asylum came the news that Freeman died from natural causes. It is stated that the autopsy was performed simply for the sake of science and permission was received from Mrs. Freeman, through Dr. Tekla Berg, the family physician.

"Part of the information received from the hospital physicians was that Freeman had many scratches on the body and his right foot was injured. They claim that he was a violent patient and that at one time he put his right foot through a window while raving. They claim that the scratches and a few minor bruises were inflicted by himself after he entered the hospital last Wednesday. As for the loss of two lower teeth, the officials say that he may have lost them before he was admitted as a patient.

SCHEIB BLAMES RIVAL FOR DEATH

NEW YORK, June 7.—The investigation into the bathtub murder mystery took a remarkable turn to-day, following the declaration of attorneys for Harry A. Scheib that if his wife Lillian was slain in the flat at No. 511 East Seventy-eighth street, as the police allege, the crime was committed by a rival of the chauffeur suspect.

Scheib himself started his attorneys to work on this new theory. In a search for evidence to bear it out, they visited the Seventy-eighth street house to-day and carefully went over the scene of the crime. They refused to divulge what they found.

"I don't know that my wife was murdered," Scheib had stated. "But if she was killed I certainly did not do it. I loved her, and the crime, if there was any, must have been the work of a rival."

Says Wife Left Him.

This rival, according to the new theory of Scheib's attorneys, had tried to win Mrs. Scheib away from the chauffeur. Whether or not he was successful has not been determined, but in this connection the chauffeur's statement that when he returned on February 2 he found a note from his wife stating that she had left him, is regarded as significant.

On two previous occasions Scheib claims his wife went away, but both times she returned. It will be recalled that John Mackenzie of Winnipeg, Man., told the police of that city that he met Mrs. Scheib here some time ago. He said she sent him her picture and wrote to him.

The fight to keep Scheib in custody pending the completion of the investigation which is being made hinges on the efforts of the police to show that he is an habitual criminal.

"The victim in the bathtub mystery was dead approximately two months when the body was found."

This statement by Professor John Larkin of Columbia University favors Henry A. Scheib, the chauffeur, who is held for the murder of his wife in their flat, at No. 511 East Seventy-eighth street, and puts the police working on the case "up in the air" as to a speedy solution of the mystery. Scheib declares he was in the apartment about two months ago. The coroner's physician thought the woman had been dead four months.

Professor Larkin, who has been making a chemical analysis of the viscera of the bathtub victim, in his report to District Attorney Whitman, says that he was unable to find the presence of poisons in the stomach. Neither could Professor Larkin find evidence of any poisons or acids in the water in which the body was partly submerged.

May Not Go to Grand Jury.

It is now problematical whether the evidence in the possession of the District Attorney will be presented to the Grand Jury. This will not necessarily mean that Scheib will be released. He may be tried on a charge of forgery that will keep him in the Tombs for months while the detective bureau continues its search for evidence to connect him with the bathtub mystery.

While it has not been specifically alleged in what manner Scheib's wife came to her death, it is understood that the prosecution expected to make out a case of poisoning, as the body found in the bathtub in the Scheib apartment a week ago was too badly decomposed to determine whether the woman had been killed by stabbing or a blow from some instrument. Professor Larkin said he wanted more time to examine the liquid in which the body was found, but he held out no hope of reporting anything of significance.

Identified by Dentist.

The coroner's physician who performed an autopsy could only contribute the opinion that the woman had been dead for at least four months and tenants of the building which the Scheibs formerly occupied were called to corroborate this opinion on the strength of odors which they had noticed two or three months back.

The identification of the body as that of Mrs. Scheib was testified to by a dentist who had done work for the woman and who examined the body at the morgue. With the case resting on this uncertain basis, and with counsel for Scheib protesting against his being held further, adjournment of the examination was taken until Friday, and the prisoner is meanwhile held in the Tombs.

How to get a flag:

Clip seven flag coupons from the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN of consecutive dates. If you wish to have the flag come by mail, send the seven coupons and a postoffice money order for forty-two cents to cover cost of mailing and handling.

If you call for the flag at the Flag Department of the AMERICAN at No. 275 Devonshire street, it will cost you thirty-five cents and seven coupons.

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

Eight days more for the Contest!

The great $35,000 Prize Contest of the AMERICAN will close on next week Thursday, June 15. This means that it has only eight days more to run.

Energetic workers are wasting little time now wondering what the others are doing.

Candidates are also waiting impatiently for the next Sunday AMERICAN, which will contain the list of winners of the special May offer; also the new list of candidates' standing, with vote totals. This will be the last list, of course, before the whole contest closes.

Next Sunday, too, brings the last of the big, ten-vote Sunday coupons. Those are well worth consideration by all candidates. It takes only 100 Sunday coupons to make 1,000 votes. And 1,000 votes are mighty important just now.

Feverish activity is displayed in every one of the seven contest districts. Candidates who hardly expect to win the capital prize are saying:

"Well, there are a lot of other fine prizes. I'll try for the next best."

That is the winning spirit!

Candidates are hereby notified that all coupon votes printed in the AMERICAN on and after Thursday, June 8, will be valueless after Thursday, June 22. This gives contestants one week only after Contest closes in which to collect and turn in coupon votes.

ILLNESS AGAIN ATTACKS POPE

ROME, June 7.—Pope Pius is again indisposed, this time as a result of the heat. The Pope again refused to obey the mandates of his physicians and held audiences despite their orders to the contrary. Despite the official assurances of the doctors at the Vatican that a few days' complete rest will completely restore the health of the Pope, there is a feeling of uneasiness on account of the advanced age of the Pontiff.

THORP ON STAND IN BULL HEARING

ALFRED, Me., June 7.—Remarks about "suppressed evidence" in connection with the sudden departure of Miss Margaret Noble, or "Sister Nivedita," as she is known, after the death of Mrs. Ole Bull, were made when the Bull will contest was resumed to-day by Sherman L. Whipple, counsel for Olea Bull Vaughan.

Mr. Whipple was trying to have introduced correspondence between Joseph G. Thorp, brother of Mrs. Bull and executor of her will, and Ralph S. Bartlett, Olea Vaughan's family lawyer.

Mr. Whipple said in the course of argument: "If we had had evidence and had suppressed it, we should be prejudiced in your eyes," meaning the eyes of the court. Mr. Whipple said later: "I think it will appear that Mr. Thorp and his family actually helped Miss Noble in packing up."

But when Judge Hobbs asked Mr. Whipple if the contestants desired to produce letters to show "that Mr. Thorp connived at her (Miss Noble's) disappearance," Mr. Whipple refused to make that specific claim.

It was learned to-day that Olea Bull Vaughan, the daughter who is contesting the will, has failed to improve in her illness at West Lebanon. She is suffering from a pulmonary trouble and is sleeping in a tent. It is not expected that she will be able to appear at the trial. Mr. Bartlett, her family lawyer, has just returned from a visit to her at West Lebanon.

Thorp Again on Stand.

Mrs. Edith Swanander and her daughter, Miss Siri Swanander, the Brooklyn women at whose home Mrs. Bull was a week previous to her death, had not returned to-day from Brooklyn. It was Miss Swanander who gave sensational testimony last Friday afternoon about mysterious Hindu medicines administered to Mrs. Bull by "Sister Nivedita," in spite of the dying woman's protest.

In the absence of the Swanander woman Joseph G. Thorp resumed the stand. Mr. Whipple began with his effort to have introduced a letter from Thorp to Bartlett on January 26, last, and a reply from Bartlett to Thorp on January 31. This was a fortnight after Mrs. Bull's death.

Charles K. Cobb of Boston, attorney for the will, objected on the ground that the letters are not competent, and will not assist the court. Mr. Whipple said:

"These leters are sought to be introduced to throw some light on the facts regarding Miss Noble's leaving for India. We regard it as material that you should know our efforts to get her here. If there is a legitimate reason why she is not here it should be explained. If the other side has allowed her to run away without any effort to get her deposition, that is important.

"These letters will show that Thorp was apprised of our claim with reference to Miss Noble's at a time when he could have taken her deposition to meet them.

"If it was in his power to get the deposition of this woman who was a predominate influence in Mrs. Bull's later life, an inference must be drawn. If we had had evidence and had suppressed it, we should be prejudiced in your eyes. We wish to show that Miss Noble left the country while in daily communications with Mr. Cobb."

Letters Are Admitted.

Judge Hobbs asked: "It is suggested that, in order to escape a summons to appear here, Miss Noble left New York under an assumed name on the Lusitania. Now the contestant desires to produce letters tending to show that Mr. Thorp connived at her disappearance. Is that it, Mr. Whipple?"

Mr. Whipple—"Not having read the letters between Miss Noble and Mr. Thorp I don't want to make any such claim. I only wish to point out that Mrs. Vaughan, from the very first, accused Miss Noble of influencing her brother, and I wish to show that the other side had notice of our claim. I think it will appear that Mr. Thorp and his family actually helped Miss Noble in packing up. But I do not accuse him."

Judge Hobbs allowed the letters to be introduced. The first one, dated January 26, 1911, was from Thorp to Bartlett. It consisted, in the following words, of an offer to help Olea:

"If Mr. Parker or I can give you any information or suggestion that will help you, please let us do so."

Bartlett's reply the next day thanked Thorp and closed thus:

"Permit me to express the hope that you, who are nearest to her in the world of kindred and by ties of blood, will not fail her at such a time."

January 31 Bartlett wrote to Thorp:

"Olea has had numerous conversations with Mis Noble. Miss Noble has described actions of Mrs. Bull indicating a fear of some malign, tragic influence emanating from Mrs. Shapleigh and brought to her through Olea. You know Olea was kept from her mother on the plea that her mother's health demanded it. The situation lends color to the idea that Mrs. Bull's belief in malign influence, and the power of mental injury by telepathy was played upon by some designing person to bring about and to make permanent this estrangement between a devoted mother ad her daughter.

Miss Noble Planned to Sail.

"Miss Noble has told Olea that she might disclose many things except for the fear that Olea would use them in contesting her mother's will. But I have no doubt that you will advise her to state fully all the facts known to her which may bear upon this contest.

"Miss Noble plans to sail February 8. I believe that she should remain here to give her story of Mrs. Bull's last year. I write this to ask if you will co-operate with me in persuading her to remain here."

On the same day Thorp replied to Bartlett, saying that it was his strong "wish that Miss Noble stay here, that her testimony would be of value, but that Mrs. Bull's mental attitude was not what Mr. Bartlett suggested." Thorp added:

"Your suggestion, I know, is utterly devoid of foundation."

Thorp also wrote that he would try to keep Miss Noble but that he could not control her actions.

MAKES THE COMPLEXION SOFT AND VELVETY

"My first advice to any woman seeking a charming complexion is to taboo the powder box," says Mae Martyn, a noted authority on beauty culture. Powder clogs up the pores, enlarges them, making coarse, muddy, blotchy complexions.

"The very best complexion beautifier I have ever used—and it is far superior to powder—is a simple, inexpensive lotion made by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in one-half pint hot water, then adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This lotion does not show on the skin nor will it rub off easily as powder does. It makes the skin soft and velvety, leaving it clear and youthful looking.

"No other preparation has so far been discovered to equal this lotion for correcting a shiny, oily, sallow complexion. Every woman should have a bottle of this wonderful lotion on her dressing table."

JOLLY FRIARS REACH BOSTON

Joy! The Friars are in town. All the little Glooms have beat it for the woods and were last seen hiking for the Blue Hills.

The Friars reached Boston at 11:25, their long train of special cars coming into the South Station a few minutes behind schedule time.

There was a big crowd at the South Station to greet the cream of the male profession who are to give their annual Frolic this afternoon and evening at the Boston Theatre.

When they had got off the train they were formed in line and marched up Summer street and along Washington to the theatre. They were escorted by members of Governor Foss's staff.

There are a round hundred of the clever performers. Among them are such celebrities as George M. Cohan, Julian Eltinge, William Collier, Andrew Mack, Richard Carle, Dave Montgomery, Lew Dockstader, Raymond Hitchcock, George Beban, William Rock and Tom Lewis.

The entertainment was written by a dozen playwrights in collaboration, the major portion of the work falling to George M. Cohan, who has turned out some of the wittiest material ever heard on the stage.

A special feature of the performance will be the appearance of ten of America's greatest song writers, who will play on seven pianos simultaneously, rendering their latest unpublished ditties.

DESJARDINS TO SPEAK ON "PEOPLE'S BANKS"

Alphonse Desjardins of Levis, P. Q., will deliver in the library of the Chamber of Commerce at 3 p. m. to-morrow the first of a series of lectures he is to give in Massachusetts on credit unions. Mr. Desjardins comes here by invitation of the State. The Chamber of Commerce is co-operating with the State in promoting this work. A credit union is a co-operative deposit and loan association to promote thrift among employes. A few of these "People's Banks" have been establisbed in Massachusetts.

MISS JANE ADDAMS, IN BOSTON FOR BIG CHARITY CONGRESS

JANE ADDAMS ON CHARITY WORK

Miss Jane Addams, of Chicago in general, and of Hull House in particular, has arrived in Boston for the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, which opens to-night in Tremont Temple. Miss Addams is staying at the Touraine, with her friend, Mrs. Frederick T. Bowen, the Chicago millionaire society woman, who frequently accompanies Miss Adams on her trips.

In speaking of the conference at which Miss Addams is to deliver three addresses, Miss Addams said:

Spirit of Co-operation.

"It is impossible to forecast the final effect of any conference or which will be the lasting impression that it leaves. Last year in St. Louis it was the spirit of co-operation and a stimulation of the general enthusiasm of the city which most directly benefited. I do not know which of the subjects under consideration by this conference have the most direct bearing on Boston conditions. You have an excellent probation system, and method of taking care of your juvenile delinquents here, and your housing laws are very good. Of course you have some undesirable old tenements, but you cannot expect a law to operate on all the conditions which have preceded it at once, and those buildings were undoubtedly put up before you had your present building laws."

The conversation turned to tuberculosis schools and school feeding, and Miss Addams expressed herself very strongly in favor of one meal a day being served to the children.

Lunches for Pupils.

"I do not feel that a lunch served to the children can in any way threaten the integrity of the family, or lessen their sense of responsibility. The parents still have the other two meals to provide, and all the clothing and other necessities. In cases where the children are not adequately cared for it is a mercy for them to be able to get this one meal, and it does no harm.

"I think that it is a very helpful idea to make the serving of the lunch a part of the school program, and thus give it a distinct educational value. I should not approve of serving such a lunch to the part of the class which needed it and not to the other children, such discrimination is harmful.

"But I can see no objection to a lunch served to all the children as a matter of course, which is prepared by the children themselves. In fact, I think it is cruel to have delicate children in a tuberculosis class where they are outdoors a large part of the time developing big appetites, and then to give them nothing to satisfy their hunger.

"We have a tuberculosis class very near Hull House in Chicago, similar to the one out in Franklin Park which you recently had closed. I think it is a most valuable class, and should be very sorry to see it closed. That is not the only place where we have school feeding in Chicago. It is being tried in several other schools, and very successfully."

Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald will speak respectively for the State and city. Robert Wade Forest of New York will respond for the conference. The president of the conference, Homer Folks of New York, will make his opening address on "The Rate of Progress." Dr. Charles W. Eliot will speak on "The Suppression of Moral Defectives," Dr. Frederick H. Wines of New York on "The Abolition of the County Jail," and the chairman of the meeting, O. F. Lewis of New York will make an address on "Some Duties Left Undone."

The subjects to be discussed at this conference will be larger in their application than ever before. Every detail of the work of reform in all its phases will be considered either in papers or in committee meetings.

Topics of Discussion.

The topics include: "Children;" "Law Breakers;" "Housing, Health and Recreation;" "Drunkenness;" "Families and Neighborhoods;" "Sex Hygiene;" "Securing of Trained Social Workers;" "The Church and Social Work;" "Problems of Rural Childhood;" "Probation and Parole;" "Standards of Living and Labor;" etc.

Among the speakers are: Dr. Charles W. Eliot; Dr. William H. Williams of Columbia University; Louis D. Brandeis of Boston (who will treat "Workingmen's Insurance, the Road of Social Efficiency"); Miss Jane Addams, Dr. Irwin H. Neff of the State Hospital at Foxboro; Dr. Richard C. Cabot of Boston; Mrs. Jessie D. Hodder of the Massachusetts State Reformatory for Women; Dr. Edward T. Devine, editor of "The Survey;" Miss Alice Higgins of the Associated Charities, Boston; Jacob Riis of New York; Rev. Washington Gladden of Cincinnati and others.

Workingmen's Homes.

This convention will be known for its attention to many practical details bearing upon the life of the working people. The best types of workingmen's houses and why this class should own their own home, as well as the matter of loans, will be considered in the light of factors in family rehabilitation, and kindred matters.

The last session will be held on Wednesday, June 14 in the evening. The meetings will take place in Tremont Temple, Ford Hall, Lorimer Hall, Kingsley Hall, University Hall, Pilgrim Hall, Chapman Hall, and 20th Century Hall.

FACES REVOLVER IN THIEF CHASE

An ugly-looking revolver with a burglar behind it did not halt Patrolman W. O. Clemlson of the Lagrange street station early to-day, when he joined in a chase that started at the house of Max Kalish, No. 6 Seneca street. Ignoring the threat of death, Clemlson grappled with the man whom he had cornered on the Broadway extension bridge, disarmed and captured him.

He took his prisoner to the Lagrange street station, where he was registered as George Diab of No. 68 Beach street. Later Diab appeared in the Municipal Court, where Kalish and officers of station 5, in which district the robbery occurred, were witnesses against him.

Kalish says he was awakened shortly after 3 a. m. by the sound of footsteps. He got up, put on some clothing and went down to the street door in time to see a man leaving by the rear door. Kalish shouted for help and gave chase.

The pursuit went through several South End streets and at Dover street Clemluson joined the race, rapidly overhauling the fugitive. Kalish, out of breath, panted up just as the policeman got the best of the fight.

Besides the criminal record which the police adduced against Diab, they presented as evidence a gold watch and chain and some of Kalish's clothing, containing $12.42, which they say they found in the prisoner's possession.

AID ST. MARK'S CHURCH.

A big crowd is expected at the annual lawn party in aid of St. Mark's Church, Dorchester, to be held next Saturday, Dorchester Day, on the grounds surrounding the home of Mayor Fitzgerald in Welles avenue, Dorchester. The affair is in charge of the Rev. John A. Daly, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. Henry J. Ryan and the Rev. John M. Farrell.

FREIMAN REPLY ON NEWSBOYS

The following letter has been received from Mitchell Freiman, chief judge of the Newsboys Court.

Editor, Boston American:

Mr. Thomas Mulkern, in your issue, has stated in substance that I am in favor of the order proposed in the City Council, transferring the control of older newsboys to the School Committee.

Mr. Mulkern is mistaken in this. I have written to all the Councilmen opposing the order, and a copy of my letter to that effect has already appeared in the daily press. It seems improper for the school officials to retain control over boys not at school and beyond the compulsory school age. I am in hearty accord with the members of the Newsboys' Union, of which I am an honorary member, in their opposition to the proposed change.

Very truly yours,
MITCHELL FREIMAN.

When Your Back Aches Suspect the Kidneys

Backache is kidney ache in most cases. The kidneys ache and throb with dull pain because there is inflammation within. You can't be rid of the ache until you cure the cause—the kidneys. There is no better recommended remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills.

Miss Sarah A. Berry, trained nurse, 100A Main St., Malden, Mass., says: "In my profession as a trained nurse many cases of kidney disorder come to my notice. I have found Doan's Kidney Pills to be an excellent remedy in relieving the conditions arising from such disorders. They seem to act as a general regulator and tonic for almost every symptom of these derangements. I have no hesitation in giving Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement."

TO PROTEST AGAINST 50-YEAR "L" MONOPOLY AT MEETING TO-NIGHT

Members of the United Improvement Association who do not favor turning over to the Boston Elevated Railroad Company all the tunnels, subways and other transit facilities of Boston for a term of fifty years, should be at the City Club to-night to hear the report of the committee on transportation.

It has been reported that an attempt would be made to induce this committee to report in favor of the fifty-year lease.

This proposition is before the legislative committee. It is being held back for late action in this session. Should the United Improvement Association declare in favor of the fifty-year lease the legislative committee could naturally regard it as a sort of public approval of the fifty-year lease and probably would grant the desire of the railroad company.

It was said to-day that the railroad interests have been very busy getting members of the association who are in favor of the fifty-year lease to promise to attend to-night's meeting and use their efforts to go through a favorable report.

Eastman Opposes Lease.

The fact that such an attempt was being made has just become known, and the opponents of granting this important privilege, and thus tie up Boston transportation facilities for two generations, have got busy and it is expected that to-night's meeting will be a very warm one.

Joseph B. Eastman, secretary of the Public Franchise League, is emphatically opposed to a fifty years lease of the tunnels and subways.

"Extensions to 1936," said Mr. Eastman, "are more generous than the situation demands. They amply meet all reasonable requirements. If the Commonwealth of Massachusetts abandons its present policy, and grants rights beyond that date, it will lead, not in progress, but in reaction. Rather than set such a precedent, it would be far better that no action at all should be taken this year."

Continuing his argument against a fifty years' lease, Mr. Eastman said:

Suggest Twenty-five Year Limit.

"This policy, which so curiously seems to be trembling in the balance, is to limit all fixed and exclusive franchise grants to public service corporations to a maximum term of twenty-five years. It is founded on the same notion that one generation ought not to tie the hands of the next. Governor Crane did not originate it; he merely defended and confirmed it. It was in existence long before his day. Perhaps no public policy in Massachusetts is more consistently backed by precedent or has had more general and thorough discussion. It has been fought over time and again, decided and redecided. If any issue in this Commonwealth ought to be dead and settled it is this one.

"Nevertheless, a bill is before the Legislature, drawn and recommended by the Joint Board, which would give the Elevated the sole and exclusive use, not of one, but of all the subways and tunnels belonging to the city of Boston for at least forty-two years and possibly fifty years in the future. On its face this is not at once apparent, and therein lies the danger. The bill directly extends the leases to 1936 only; but closer inspection shows that the company is given an option to secure an extension beyond that date upon terms to be fixed by a board of arbitrators under certain limitations. The maximum term of such an extension is twenty-five years; the minimum is a period which will 'at an assumed rate of rental of 4½ per cent.' provide for the payment in full at maturity of all outstanding subway and tunnel bonds. It has been estimated that this minimum term will, under the most favorable conditions, be seventeen years.

Would Give Control Till 1953.

"Stripped of its verbiage, then, and brought into the light, this bill stands forth in its nakedness as a proposition to give the Elevated vested rights to the exclusive possession of the underground streets of Boston at least until 1953 and more probably until 1961.

"That this bill is a gross violation of the policy already described goes without saying. State policies, of course, are by no means sacred, but surely it is sheer folly to overthrow without good reason one which has worked well. There can be no manner of doubt that the one in question has worked extremely well. Since it was first inaugurated, fully $50,000,000 has been invested in the combined West End and Elevated systems, and the service has been better, at least, than most American cities have enjoyed. The Elevated was conceived, born and has grown up under this policy. Yet no claim is made nor is it true that any other street railway company in the country, whatever its terms or rights, has secured new capital from the sale of stock in corresponding conditions of the market more cheaply or more easily.

"Why, then, make a change? Two answers are given, and, strangely enough, they contradict each other. On the one hand it is claimed, and Mayor Fitzgerald is responsible for this, that the city will be at the mercy of the company in 1936 if no provision is made for leases beyond that date. On the other hand, the officials of the company in an excess of altruism are eager to rescue the city from this predicament and go so far in their zeal as to claim that the company will be at the mercy of the city in 1936 unless longer leases are provided.

No Precedent In Past.

"What are the facts? Speaking frankly, the first claim is nonsense. By 1936 the sinking funds will cover fully half of the city's debt. As for the remainder, the city can be in no possible danger unless the subways and tunnels lost all value during the next twenty-five years, and not even then. They are absolutely essential to any system of rapid transit by land, and will always so continue until the face of Boston is made over. If some other form of transportation takes its place, the Elevated will be bankrupt and its guarantee of no consequence no matter how long the lease. But in that highly impossible event the State can always protect the city by requiring any new transportation company to assume the remainder of the debt before it is given the right to do business in Boston.

"As for the second claim, the argument is that the Elevated needs much money for new improvements and that the capital cannot be secured cheaply, if at all, so long as there is danger that the system may be broken up and its value destroyed at the end of 25 years. It is alleged that the company has already assumed more burdens than it can well carry, and that it must have ample time to assimilate these burdens and work out its own salvation without danger of interference from the public. Aside from the fact that the city and not the company furnishes the capital for the subways which form the bulk of the new improvements, the whole argument is contrary to the known facts of long experience.

"The Elevated has never in its life had as much as 25 years vested security for the future. Its early financing, before a dollar of earnings had been demonstrated, was done with but a twenty-year tenure of the Tremont Street Subway, the only link existing or provided for between its elevated structures. In 1903 it issued $3,300,000 new stock at 155. In the after-panic year, 1908, it issued $8,450,000 new stock at 110, with only nine years to run on the Tremont street subway lease, fourteen years on the East Boston tunnel, fourteen years on the West End lease, fourteen years on its special charter privileges, and twenty-five years on the Washington street tunnel. The 1,501 shares of this issue not taken by stockholders were sold at auction at 130.

Limit Exclusive Grants.

"The subways and tunnels are the key to the transportation situation. Without them no practical elevated system is possible and no surface system could be successfully operated. With its perpetual franchises for elevated structures, recklessly granted in 1897, and a fifty-year possession of the subways and tunnels, the Elevated would have tenure regardless of behavior. It is altogether unnecessary and unwise to depend upon the State's reserved powers to repeal charters, revoke surface locations or acquire property by eminent domain. The first amounts to confiscation and would be used only in extraordinary circumstances. The second is of little use so long as the Elevated holds the key and terminal of these locations in the subways and tunnels. The third could only be exercised at great expense, an expense which payment for the perpetual Elevated rights or a steady increase in the value of real estate might easily make unreasonable and out of the question.

"Far better results can be secured by the simple process of so limiting exclusive grants that the Elevated must, at some time not too far in the future, come before public authorities, render an account of its stewardship and ask to have the rights renewed. The absolute soundness and effectiveness of this policy cannot be better illustrated than by the very attitude of the Elevated at the present time. Has there been any time in recent years when the company has shown more zeal in promising subways, extending transfers, correcting grievances, and placating public opinion in general than now, when it is asking something from the Legislature?

"In 1922 the present contract between the Elevated and the State, which determines fares and compensation for the use of the streets, runs out. The question of bringing about a new and better relation between the State, the city and the company, a relation which will increase the ties of mutual self-interest and establish a genuine partnership, should have been taken up along with the question of the subway and tunnel leases. That opportunity for statesmanship has gone by for the present, but it needs no gift of prophecy to state that the Commonwealth and city will be in a better position to secure from the company a new and improved arrangement, when the present contract expires in 1922, if the company does not now receive a two-generation grip on the key to the transportation system."

MARGARET BARRY, LIBRARY GIRL, TO BE BRIDE TO-DAY

MISS MARGARET BARRY

Another of Boston's charming Public Library girls is married to-day.

She is Miss Margaret Barry of Dorchester, one of the attendants in the big building on Copley square. She is to become the bride of Frank Hennigan, who is in charge of the library periodical room.

Miss Barry will make the third library bride within six weeks. On April 19 Miss Anna Moran was married to Dr. Frank J. O'Hara. Three weeks later Miss Mabel Grush of Roxbury, another attendant at the Boston Public Library, became a bride.

Now the library is to lose a third one among its girl attendants. To make matters all the worse, from the trustees' standpoint, it is reported that four other girls are engaged and are preparing to forsake the library for the fireside within the next few months.

The Boston Public Library is supposed to be sacred to Art and Literature. People come there from all over the world to see the wonderful paintings by Sargent, de Chavannes and Abbey. Students gather there to study. The atmosphere of the institution is one of quiet and culture. No one talks loudly there or laughs heartily. This is not only a big library but it is Boston Public Library at that.

Perhaps the anti-sentiment air of the place attracted Dan Cupid from a spirit of pure mischief. At any rate he is stealing the demure library girls as fast as the trustees can hire and train them.

It has been suggested that the trustees engage none but unattractive women, fallen in the vale of years, if they wish to retain their staff of attendants.

Miss Barry and Mr. Hennigan are wedded in St. Peter's church, Dorchester. They will go to New York for their wedding trip and thence to the Adirondacks. Returning, they will live at No. 18 Greenbrier street, Dorchester.

STRICKEN MOOSE HOLDS UP CARRIAGE

PRINCETON, Me., June 7.—While Dr. Percy G. Getchell and his wife were driving to Topsfield they were suddenly confronted by a cow moose, which took its station in the middle of the road and refused to move. Dr. Getchell noticed that the animal was weak on its legs and on closer investigation discovered that its eyes were sightless. There was a bullet wound in the moose's head, while her body was covered with sores. The physician put an end to the animal's suffering and then notified the game warden. Dr. Getchell expressed the opinion that the moose had been blinded by forest fires.

ST. VINCENT'S MEET CLOSES

Unusual enthusiasm marked the beginning of the last session to-day of the national conference of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple. To-day's session began at 9:30 and continues until noon. During the next hour the conference closes.

Richard C. Gannon, president of Superior Council of Chicago, presided at to-day's meeting. "The Spiritual Side of the Society," was the general topic under discussion. President Gannon read a paper on "The Spiritual Advantages of Membership in the Society," and Lawrence Gonzer a paper on "How the Society May Be Extended."

The sub-topics discussed were: "Who May and Should Be Members," "The Object of the Members," "Visiting Poor Families," "Friendly Visits and After Care," and "Distribution of Books and Papers."

At last night's meeting Louis Fuss, of St. Louis, in discussing "The Laborer and His Family in Our Large Cities," said:

"During the last few years the cry has arisen all over the country 'Back to the farm.' This to relieve the congestion in our large cities, to check the advancing cost of living which presses hardest on the poor, to stop the growing demoralization of the people living under present conditions. To this cry, with ten fold more intensity let the cry be added, 'Back to religion, back to Christian life, to Christian sentiments, to Christian morality.'

"To obtain this healthy atmosphere, an essential condition in our age is a Catholic daily press. The conviction of this necessity has been forced on me more and more with each succeeding year, and I cannot see the possibility of a material improvement in society without it.

"Another feature, an important one, is providing better homes for the laborer. The nomadic instinct with all its moral perils would then be weakened if not destroyed. Home ownership tends to good citizenship, to moral society, to solidify the State, to the preservation of law and order.

"In all homes, rented or owned, use your influence to make the home attractive, to make it the haven of quiet and peace, of rest after labor, where there are no quarrels, no intemperate words, no foul language, where the conversation will be edifying, not scandalizing the children, no oath or curses ever uttered, in one sentence where there will be a Christian atmosphere.

"Pawn shops (Monts de Piete) should be established to help the laborer in temporary distress and free him from the clutches of money sharks who often make a life slave of him. There should be labor bureaus, labor exchanges where employer and employes needing each other could quickly meet.

"For Catholics, every parish should have its parish school with hall and play grounds affording the facilities for parish meetings, for recreation, for healthy plays, amusements of all kinds as would necessarily happen under church control. Moral moving pictures, the passion of our Lord should be shown as effective lessons, especially to the young."

The second speaker was J. H. Kohnescher, president of the Particular Council of Cincinnati, O., on "Tenement House Conditions." He said:

"There is much hope to be placed in the scheme now being advocated by many bishops and priests throughout the country looking toward colonization. We cannot help but feel that this is a step in the right direction. If poor people can be induced to go out into the more sparsely settled rural districts and secure humble homes of their own, it will be for the betterment of the moral, social and civic condition of our American people."

PLANT DIVORCE CASE DROPPED?

The absence of Mrs. Caroline Griggs Plant's divorce suit against her husband, Thomas G. Plant, from the June trial list, issued, confirms the rumor that this notable tangle will not be aired in court.

Plant was the head of the big Roxbury shoe firm. He is estimated to be worth $30,000,000. There was a story to the effect that he had fallen in love with Kitty Hadley, a pretty girl who served his meals at the factory. Later Kitty was found in New York, it was said, by Mrs. Plant and what she learned from the girl led to a suit for divorce.

A close friend of Mr. Plant said to-day that in his opinion the suit would never be brought to trial.

MANY DEGREES GIVEN BY B. U.

Several hundred young men and women received degrees from Boston University at the commencement exercises held at 10:30 to-day in Tremont Temple. Despite the rain the huge auditorium was thronged with friends and relatives of the graduates.

Additional interest in the occasion arises from the fact that it will be the last commencement at which President William E. Huntington, Ph. D., LL. D., will preside. Ex-Governor John L. Bates, LL. D., chancellor of the university, will make a few remarks.

DeWitt Clinton Huntington, S. T. D., LL. D., chancellor emeritus of Nebraska Wesleyan University, will offer prayer.

The address of the day will be presented by Hamilton Wright Mabie, LL. D., associate editor of the Outlook, who will talk on "Works and Days."

DILLON'S HURTS ARE NOT SERIOUS

A cable message received from Dublin to-day by John O'Callaghan, national secretary of the United Irish League of America, from Joseph Devlin, M. P., secretary of the United Irish League in Ireland, conveyed the news that the injuries sustained by John Dillon, M. P., in an automobile accident Monday are not serious.

"Dillon all right," is the message sent by Mr. Devlin. The cable dispatches had stated that while riding into Dundalk at night the motor in which Mr. Dillon was ran into a culvert and that he was thrown through the glass shield, sustaining injuries to his head and back which at first it was feared would prove fatal.

Mr. Dillon is in his sixtieth year and his physical health has never been very robust, so that grave fears were entertained for him.

BIG RAINFALL AIDS FARMERS

The drought in New England is broken. Almost five times as much rain fell during the storm just ended as during the entire month of May. The local weather bureau recorded 1.54 inches in this vicinity. During May the total precipitation was only thirty-eight one-hundredths of an inch.

The storm spread all over New England, and it was particularly beneficial because the rain soaked into the ground in a long, steady and well-distributed fall and was not carried off in streams as it would have been had there been a more violent downpour of shorter duration.

Crops Are Saved.

From towns all over the State came cheerful messages to-day that the reservoirs and sources of water supply which had been extremely low are replenished and imminent danger of a water famine has been averted, at least for a time.

Farmers who had been worried by the long drought were in a happier frame of mind, for the parched and baked fields got a thorough wetting and the brooks and streams rose considerably. In some places the crops were on the verge of ruin, and if the rain had not come at this time there would undoubtedly have been great damage to the yield.

The Metropolitan Water Board reported that its reservoirs had been raised several inches and those towns and cities which had been forced to cut down consumption of water by the municipality and by individuals saw new stores at their command.

Storm Holds Vessels.

Although the rainfall was general, northern parts of New England were not benefited so much as the eastern and southern sections. Parts of Maine had little precipitation compared with Boston's inch and a half. Connecticut tobacco farmers were especially pleased by the storm, and peach and apple orchards and strawberry plantations, which were seriously affected by the heat and the drought, were greatly improved by the timely relief.

The wind that attended the storm hereabouts held many vessels in port, for the half-gale kicked up a heavy sea outside and many of the commanders of fishing vessels and tows of barges elected to remain at anchor in the harbors along the coast.

FINNISH GIRL IS SOUGHT BY POLICE

Search for Aini T. Touminen, a nineteen-year-old Finnish girl, who disappeared from Chicago November 11, 1910, has been instituted by the Boston police, as the result of the receipt of a circular from Chicago. The girl, who is unable to speak English, was last seen when she left the house of N. J. Halman at No. 1107 Grace street, Chicago, ostensibly to mail some letters. The police of every city in the country have now been called in to conduct a search at the request of J. W. Sarlund, treasurer of the Chicago Finnish Committe.

'Cascarets' Splendid For Elderly Folks

The rule for old people is—One Cascaret daily. The bowels, like other muscles, grow less active with age—They need help.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. And most of them need them daily. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at sixty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. And there is no matter of choice here. The only such tonic is Cascarets and they cost only 10 cents per box.

NEW RECORD BY GRAND TRUNK

MONTREAL, June 7.—The feat of the Grand Trunk Railroad officials in bringing the special train, bearing 125 business men and officials of Boston and Massachusetts, to Montreal from Boston yesterday in eight and one-half hours, beating any existing record on this run of 335 miles by one hour and one-half, is the most talked of subject among the people of Montreal to-day.

Railroad officials of this city say it will be many years before this record is beaten. Delegations of Montreal business men, who expected to meet the Boston party at St. John's shortly after 6 o'clock, were informed by railroad officials on the train that the record was being broken and they were forced to make a change in their plans, reaching St. John's almost two hours before they anticipated.

The record was established between White River Junction, where the train was taken over officially by the Grand Trunk, and Montreal. The start was made from Boston at 8:35, and the train was not able to make better than the schedule through Massachusetts and New Hampshire over the tracks of the Boston & Maine, until the Grand Trunk took over the train at White River Junction. From there on the speed attained was the marvel of all on board. The run of 191 miles from White River Junction to Montreal was made in four hours and ten minutes.

At times the train sped over the rails at the rate of better than sixty miles an hour. White River Junction to Montpelier Junction there is a stretch of up grade of 65 miles but this was accomplished in 75 minutes. From Montpelier Junction to Essex Junction a stretch of 32 miles was travelled in just 32 minutes, and from the latter place to St. Albans, 25 miles, the train got over the ground in 26 minutes.

Grand Trunk officials showed their deep interest in this party from Boston, for many of them were on board. Joseph M. Shea, traveling passenger agent of the road, came through with the party from Boston. At White River Junction, J. W. Hanley, passenger agent, Grand Trunk, came aboard and took charge of the train.

As an added incentive to Engineer Amos Frost, J. A. Fitzsimmons, traveling engineer of the Grand Trunk, rode in the cab with him and directed affairs, while at many of the stops, J. J. McKinnon, the train master, who got on board at White River Junction, went forward with suggestions for saving time.

The best time from Boston to Montreal ever made hitherto was ten hours. The roadbed, however, was in perfect condition, the motive power was in first-class shape, and every other condition was soon found to be conducive to a record after leaving White River Junction. Members of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange and their guests are proud to-day that it was their train which established this record.

On the way up stops were made to take on delegations at Lowell, Nashua Junction, Manchester, and Concord. The start was made in a drizzling rain which soon turned to a heavy downpour but the sky cleared after getting into Vermont, and the remainder of the trip was ideal.

At St. John's, twenty-seven miles from Montreal, a delegation from the Canadian metropolis met the Boston party. This consisted of Fitz James E. Browne, James Sharing, R. Gobier, S. H. Martel and W. Major of the Montreal Real Estate Exchange.

On reaching Bonaventure station, the party was met by another delegation headed by Alderman U. H. Dandurand, who welcomed the party in a short speech. A short trip about the city in special observation cars was then made, the party then going to their headquarters at the Place Viger Hotel.

Here dinner was tendered the Massachusetts delegation by the Real Estate Exchange, Mayor Guerin officially welcoming the party. Toasts were made to the King, the President of the United States and the guests. After the dinner a trip was made to Dominion Park as guests of the City of Montreal.

At the dinner Fitzjames E. Browne presided, and Mayor J. J. Guerin, John J. Martin, Senator H. N. Stearns, H. C. Brown, General Hugh Bancroft, Charles M. Conant, President George S. Smith, Boston Chamber of Commerce; George E. Smith and Chairman E. P. Shaw of the Boston Exchange were seated at the head table.

The toast to the King, the President and "our guests" was responded to by Mr. Martin.

The welcome will be long remembered by all, and to-day every member is talking about Montreal's hospitality. To-day the party will be the guests of the Montreal Harbor Commissioners in a trip of inspection of the docks, water front and harbor improvements that have been made in this busy little city which has shown the way in many lines of advancement to larger cities in the United States.

Mayor Fitzgerald and Mayor J. Edward Barry of Cambridge will arrive in the city to join the Massachusetts party. This afternoon the party will visit Mount Royal and to-night will come the big dinner at the Place Viger Hotel.

DIAMOND STAR AND BOSTON BRIDE ON HONEYMOON

MRS. CHARLES C. MOLLALEY

Charles C. Mullaley, former centre fielder of the Brockton baseball club, and Miss Alice O'Brien, a Roxbury girl, sprung a surprise on their many friends to-day with the announcement that they were married and would spend their honeymoon at a pretty little bungalow at Wollaston.

The marriage took place at Emmanuel Church, Back Bay, the Rev. Samuel McComb performing the ceremony last Saturday afternoon.

Both the bride and groom suddenly disappeared Saturday, and although their friends were aware of the engagement they had no knowledge of the marriage until the groom called up one of his friends over the 'phone and informed him of the fact and invited him to the Wollaston bungalow.

GARY RESUMES STEEL RECITAL

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Appearing to discuss the published reports that the Department of Justice had decided to prosecute criminally the officers of the Steel trust, Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the executive committee of the United States Steel Corporation, again took the stand before the Stanley Investigating Committee to-day to continue his recital of the details of the merger of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company and the Steel Corporation in the panicky days in 1907.

Representative Martin W. Littleton of New York, famous as a criminal lawyer, to-day took the place of Chairman Stanley in cross-examining the Steel magnate. The committee was not quite satisfied with Judge Gary's explanation last Friday that the absorption of the Tennessee Company, November, 1907, was necessary to avert a ruinous panic. In this connection Mr. Gary told of the midnight conference at the home of J. Pierpont Morgan and the journey by special train of Henry C. Frick and himself to the White House, where the consent of President Roosevelt and the then Secretary of State, Mr. Root, was gained for merger.

The preliminary line of questioning to-day indicated that the committee wants a more detailed explanation of how the merger averted a panic.

HONORARY DEGREE FOR GOV. BALDWIN

NEW YORK, June 7.—Commencement exercises of Columbia and New York universities were held to-day. At Columbia honorary degrees were conferred upon a number of prominent men, among them Governor Simeon E. Baldwin of Connecticut. At New York University the honorary degree of doctor of divinity was conferred upon the Rev. Dr. John Henry Jowett of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church.

LOVE LETTERS CLEW IN THEFTS

Love letters from "Kathryn" pleading with him to "throw the accursed life aside and step out into the bright sunlight, where our love can abide as such," were found on Edward Brooks, alias Lester A. Gordon, whose sensational capture near the State House, the police believe, will put a stop to mysterious robberies of Y. M. C. A. lockers in large cities all over the country. Brooks was arraigned in court to-day charged with having robbed the locker of Louis J. Konrad of No. 914 Massachusetts avenue, while the latter was taking a shower bath at the Boston Y. M. C. A., Ashburton place.

Konrad said that his locker had been pried open and that his watch and $1 had been stolen. James A. Langdon, assistant athletic instructor, suspected Brooks, who was leaving the building, and tried to stop him. A scuffle resulted, but Brooks got away. After a chase in which several hundred people took part Brooks was captured.

From his pockets was taken a watch and money declared to be Konrad's, also a watch inscribed with the initials "G. M.," a silver match box with the monogram "H. J. E." and a pair of cuff links.

Inspector Pelton secured a bag for which Brooks had a check. In it were found watches, jewelry and cards and correspondence which led the police to suspect that the prisoner had made a practice of looting Y. M. C. A. buildings.

In the bag was a stack of letters written to Brooks by a young girl who signed herself "Kathryn." From what Kathryn wrote it seemed as if she made the acquaintance of Brooks somewhere in the South. He made love to her, according to these letters, and gave her to understand that he was an heir to a fortune. Then he went away, and, according to her declarations, taking her money and rings and neglecting to settle his account at the hotel.

In one of her letters Kathryn said her heart was hungry for him. "You seem to be such a manly man that I cannot believe what they say of you," is one of the quotations.

4 IN ACID CASE LEAVE COLLEGE

Donald Henderson Clarke of Holyoke, Stoddard Hoffman of Tuxedo Park, Charles C. Adell of Chicago and Benjamin S. Gantz are no longer students at Harvard College. Clarke was a junior and the three others were members of the Freshman class until they had an interview with Assistant Dean Edgar H. Wells concerning the acid throwing episode at No. 574 Massachusetts avenue, for which they had seventy-four-year-old William H. Crapo arrested.

Crapo was in court to-day for sentence, having pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery which Clarke brought against him.

The young students were closeted with Mr. Wells for a very few minutes yesterday. He inquired if the newspaper accounts of their escapade were correct and the boys corroborated the story. Then they withdrew from college.

Evelyn Ward, Mabelle Gordon and Florence Emmett, the girls upon whom the students called early Sunday to invite them to take an automobile trip to Providence, have moved away from No. 574 Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Crapo says she accelerated their going by refunding to them a part of the payment they had made for their rooms.

Hoffman left for New York yesterday in response to a telegram from his parents. Last night Clarke received a message from him to the effect that the interview with the dean was mild and enjoyable in comparison with his reception at home. The other boys have not yet quit their rooms in Randolph and Westmorely halls, but planned to leave to-day.

HOW TO DESTROY THE DANDRUFF GERM

BY A SPECIALIST

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well known fact, but when we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many of the worst cases of catarrh and consumption, we appreciate the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are, therefore, particularly pleased to give herewith the prescription which an eminent scientist states he has found, after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair-growth after years of baldness. This prescription can be made up at home, or any druggist will put it up for you: 6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Composee, one-half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly, and after standing half an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger tips. If you wish it perfumed, add half a teaspoonful of To-Kalon Perfume, which unites perfectly with the other ingredients. While this preparation is not a dye, it is unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original color.

CAUTION.—Do not apply where hair is not desired and be sure to avoid tonics containing poisonous wood alcohol.

The Day of the Electric Wagon Is Here

Endorsed by The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston Because:

the Company's own tests covering a period of two years prove the superior reliability as well as economy of the Electric over horses and wagons and gasoline cars. So the Edison Company is changing over its entire equipment of horses and wagons, horses and buggies and gasoline cars to Electrics—not because they are Electric but because after two years of improvement—especially in batteries—the Electric car furnishes the one best solution for trackless transportation through the streets of Boston and its suburbs.

Public Sentiment and Private Gain:

should both support Electric Vehicles, for by their use cleaner streets make for public health, while higher speed and compactness will obviate traffic congestion. They stand for public health and economy.

There is no noise, no smoke-filled nor grease-soaked streets where the Electric Vehicle is used. Neither can the horse compete with Electric machinery. One small motor will generally replace 2 horses and 2 wagons.

Electric versus Gasoline-Comparisons:

The business wagon must run every working day of the year and it must run for many years.
Get statistics on the comparative reliability of Electrics and gasoline cars.
The Electric has but one moving part—and that is rotating.
The gas engine has many moving parts and these are reciprocating.

This field will be filled by the Electric Vehicle. First, because of its Reliability, and second, because of its Economy. These two points tell the whole story.

Your ordinary horse driver can run your Electric, because it has no complications. You are compelled to hire a high-priced chauffeur for the gasoline car, or expend large sums while your present men learn, at your expense, to handle complicated, delicate machinery.

The simplicity of the Electric is chiefly because your power is manufactured and stored in the car for you at night after the day's work is done.

MEXICO CITY SHAKEN BY EARTHQUAKE THAT KILLS HUNDREDS

One Hundred and Eighty Soldiers Crushed to Death By Falling Walls.

came President and restored order there, Mexico was to all appearances happy, prosperous and content, and a model to all republics, especially in Central and South America.

Then came rumors of discontent. The revolution came. Diaz resigned, or rather was forced out. The country was in a few months in a political ferment from Juarez on the north to the Yucatan Peninsula on the south.

With the departure of Diaz peace seemed to have come again to troubled Mexico, and to-day Madero, undoubtedly the next President, was on his way in a special train to Mexico City. He went through the country as a conquering hero. And yet again the strange fate intervened to mar the happiness of the people.

Earthquake! How this word is dreaded in this mountainous country. There are 15,000,000 people in Mexico. Most of them are peons, hard-working natives, ignorant, superstitious. Tremors come often in the mountains, and the very word earthquake is terribly feared.

Previous Losses Heavy.

The Rocky Mountains extend into Mexico under the name of the Sierra Madre Mountains. They are filled with volcanos. Many of these are active. They denote the geological structure of the country, and make it frequently troubled with earthquakes.

There is a great volcano—Popocatepetl—near the City of Mexico, 17,550 high. This is one of the wonders of the world, beside which the smoking, threatening Vasuvius near Naples is but a pigmy.

Geologists constantly expect earthquakes in Central America, Mexico and the western coast of North America. In times past there has been great loss of life in Mexico in earthquakes.

Mexico City, the capital, is in the heart of mountainous Mexico. The city has a population of 470,659, while in the Federal district, like the District of Columbia around Washington, there is a total of 719,062.

The city is one of the oldest and most beautiful on the American continent. It is changed but little in its architecture since it was captured in our own war with Mexico. Its buildings are of the Spanish type, whitewashed or of concrete, stone or cement, with roofs of red tile and seldom more than a story or two in height. The palace, the largest building in the city, is a beautiful structure.

The city is thoroughly modern, with electric lights, trolley cars, telephones and every modern luxury. When it is considered that the city lies in the heart of the mountains, the difficulties which had to be overcome make the city a tribute to the genius of Diaz, who welcomed foreign capital, and thus the city was made thoroughly modern. There are banks and branch shops of large New York, London and Paris stores, and there is an opera house which equals in size and luxury those of other modern cities.

Close to Volcano.

Like all Central American and Spanish cities, there is a great square or plaza in the centre of the city, and here society drives and walks in the cool of the evening. Business ceases during the afternoon and the people of the city take their siesta or rest within their homes while the hot sun beats down on the city within the mountains.

The close proximity of the great volcano of Popocatapetl has made the city not unlike Naples in its fear of an eruption and destruction. But geologists show that the city would need fear an earthquake almost as much as a volcanic eruption, the presence of a great volcano by necessity meaning troubles in the structure of the ground itself.

MEXICAN QUAKE IS FELT AT HARVARD

The Harvard University seismograph recorded the earthquake at 6.09 a. m. to-day. It was calculated that the trouble was from 2,300 to 2,700 miles distant.

The pendulums that mark the earth's trembling were still in motion at 8:45, when the records were changed.

The earthquake was catalogued at Harvard as of the first order. The experts were not able, however, to tell where the upheaval was nor even the direction from which the shock came.

It was believed that the surface of the entire continent was affected by the tremendous jar.

What Pendulum Showed.

This is what the seismograph showed at Cambridge:

The earthquake began at 6:09:39 a. m., and the second preliminary motion was recorded at 6:15:48. The main wave came in at 6:26:04. A second group of main waves were recorded by the seismograph at 6:38:04.

The new type of seismograph consists of a heavy weight, so suspended in front of a tall iron pedestal as to be always in neutral equilibrium and unaffected by any influence other than gravity.

When the earth is quaking and trembling directly below it, it is standing still for the moment. It is spanned by an iron arch, whose base is a stone pier, penetrating the earth. All earth movements are directly communicated to the arch. Hence, when even the slightest tremor takes place, the arch moves therewith, but the weight below remains quiescent.

Pen Records Shock.

Attached to the stationary weight by a jeweled pivot is a long, slender arm of aluminum, with a writing pen at its outer end. Upon the same foundation with the arch, and sharing all earth movements therewith, is a revolving wheel whose broad tire is a sheet of paper, against which the writing pen rests. The principle of the instrument, in a nutshell, is that each earthquake moves the paper against the pen and records its tremors in zigzags or curves. But by a delicate adjustment the aluminum arm exagerates the earthquake tremor to a measurable degree.

The wheel, with its paper tire, makes one revolution every hour. The recording pen commences its record on one edge, and, by aid of a thread on the wheel's axle, is made to trace gradually a perfect spiral over the endless band of paper, unless an earthquake interrupts. Thus the normal lines of the pen do not overlap.

By means of an electro magnet attached to a specially made clock, a current is communicated every minute to another pen point, following the first and resting upon the same paper. The latter gives a hitch each time it receives an electric impulse, and thus checks off minutes along the spiral line traced by the first pen, which is "keeping tab" on Mother Earth's antics. A new paper is placed on the wheel at the same minute each day.

Earth Movements Timed.

It being known precisely when a new record is set, the exact time of a zig-zag earthquake line can be determined by counting the minute marks on the paper; and the exact second of an earth tremor's beginning can be learned by applying a delicate scale dividing by sixty the space between two minute marks.

A pair of these instruments is necessary at each station. One, always pointed north and south, records earthquake vibrations moving east and wen.; the other, directed east and west, detects north and south movements. Each tremor makes its record on both instruments simultaneously. The zig-zag lines will be seen to differ materially when teh paper strips aer taken from the wheels and carefully compared with a scale. The exact direction of the earthquake wave, as well as its horizontal width, is thus measured to a nicety.

Earthquake Warnings Next.

systematically forecast, is a prophecy which may sound visionary, but one which has some scientific foundation. The Japanese seismologists now believe they find indications of earthquakes' approaches upon the records of their magnetic instruments, preceding directly the effects shown by their seismographs. In other words, they have found what appear to be magnetic warnings of earthquakes.

COURT TO RULE ON DEATH DATE

The question as to the date of the death of William Scollay Whitwell, 3d, the Harvard student who disappeared in February, 1905, and who has never been heard from, will be settled legally by the full bench of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts.

Three trustees, Schuyler S. Bartlett, William Tudor and Augustus P. Loring, having a fund in their hands, the distribution of which depends upon the determination of the date of young Whitwell's death, want the court to determine that fact.

The date of young Whitwell's death, when decided judicially, will determine the manner in which the trust fund shall be distributed. This fund was created in 1892 by young Whitwell's grandfather, William Scollay Whitwell, and the terms of the trust provided that the trustees, upon the death of the settlor, should divide the fund "in equal shares between his three children, William Scollay Whitwell, Jr., Mary H. Whitwell and Elizabeth Tudor." The trust fund was to be held in trust for the settlor's children for their lives with other provisions as to its disposal.

CONSERVATORY MAN GOES TO HALIFAX

Guy E. McLean, president of this year's graduating class at the New England Conservatory, has accepted a position for next season as director of the music department of the Ladies' College and Conservatory of Music at Halifax. This is a leading school of the Canadian provinces, which in years past has drawn largely on the Conservatory in Boston for its teachers. Mr. McLean is one of the most prominent of students now at the music school, having served as president of the Neume board and president of the Sinfonia.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR "9TH" FETE

The final meeting of the committee that has been preparing for the celebration in observance of the mustering into the United States service of the [illegible]th Regiment for its three years' service in the Civil War will be held to-morrow evening in the East Armory, East Newton street, and all details will then be arranged.

The program for the celebration begins with the solemn high military mass in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross at 11 o'clock in the morning, which will be celebrated by Rev. Michael J. O'Connor, chaplain of the regiment. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. Fr. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College. Following the church services there will be a luncheon served at the armory and at 2 o'clock the street parade will take place, the veterans of the Civil War riding in automobiles that have been tendered the committee for the occasion.

The banquet will begin at 4 o'clock and the after-dinner speakers will include Governor Eugene H. Foss, Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, Hon. Joseph H. O'Neil, Colonel J. J. Sullivan, Hon. M. J. Murray, Rt. Rev. Joseph G. Anderson and Congressman William F. Murray. James M. Phelan will be the presiding officer and will introduce Hon. Joseph C. Pelletier for toastmaster.

The work of decorating the East Armory has already begun. This will be one of the features of the celebration, as the decorations will be carried out on an unique scale.

All of the more than 600 members will be present at the meeting to-morrow night. Their presence and added influence and suggestion are needed.

200 OUT OF WORK.

BENNINGTON, Vt., June 7.—An attachment to enforce collection of a note for $10,000 caused the closing of the factory of Bottom & Torrance, manufacturers of collars, shirtwaists, sheets and pillow cases, and the consequent loss of employment for 200 operatives.

HOTEL MEN ON AN AUTO TOUR

Four hundred hotel men from all parts of the country were scheduled to leave the Hotel Vendome at 9:30 to-day for an automobile trip through Lexington and Concord. They are here for the thirty-second annual convention of their mutual benefit association, and they will be entertained in various ways until Saturday. Tonight the hotel men were to be in possession of the Pop concert in Symphony Hall.

The opening day of the convention was devoted chiefly to business, but after the session in the Hotel Brunswick, where Mayor Fitzgerald and President Treadway of the Senate made speeches of welcome, the hotel men and their wives went, after luncheon, to the State House, where they were received by Governor and Mrs. Foss. Last night, at the Somerset, 350 of them sat down to a banquet, while their wives and daughters were having an almost equally elaborate dinner at the Copley Square.

The report of the officers showed the association to be in a flourishing condition. The secretary-treasurer said there was a reserve fund of nearly $50,000 after setting aside $6,000 to the mortuary fund. The association since its organization had paid out upward of $800,000 in benefits. The death benefits were $1200 and in some cases more. The assessment rates, too, are the same today that they were twenty years ago. The report says that during the year of President Mitchell's administration, 201 new members have been secured. The total membership is 1551.

The two loving cups offered by the president for those securing the greatest number of new members during the year were won by H. N. Dutton of the Piedmont Hotel, Atlanta, who secured 22, and by W. H. Marshall of the Seminole, Jacksonville, who secured 21. Charles D. Smead of the Hollenbeck, Los Angeles, was a close runner-up with 20. Mr. Dutton was not present on account of illness, and Mr. Houser of Atlanta, secretary of the Southern Hotel Men's Association, accepted the cup in his behalf.

Officers were then elected, a Boston man being chosen president. The election resulted as follows: J. Linfield Damon, Jr., of the Hotel Thorndike, president; Edgar S. De Wolf of the Hotel Granada, San Francisco, vice-president; J. K. Blatchford of the Auditorium Tower, Chicago, secretary-treasurer.

RASH SO BAD BABY CAME NEAR DYING

Head Broke Out. Spread to Arms, Legs and Entire Body. Itched So He Would Scratch Until Blood Ran. One Box of Cuticura Ointment and Nearly One Cake of Cuticura Soap Cured Him. Has Had No Return.

"When my boy was about three months old, his head broke out with a rash which was very itchy and ran a watery fluid. We tried everything we could but he got worse all the time, till it spread to his arms, legs and then to his entire body. He got so bad that he came near dying. The rash would itch so that he would scratch till the blood ran, and a thin yellowish stuff would be all over his pillow in the morning. I had to put mittens on his hands to prevent him tearing his skin. He was so weak and run down that he took fainting spells as if he were dying. He was almost a skeleton and his little hands were thin like claws.

"He was bad about eight months when we tried Cuticura Remedies. I had not laid him down in his cradle in the daytime for a long while. I washed him with Cuticura Soap and put on one application of Cuticura Ointment and he was so soothed that he could sleep. You don't know how glad I was he felt better. It took one box of Cuticura Ointment and pretty near one cake of Cuticura Soap to cure him. I think our boy would have died but for the Cuticura Remedies and I shall always remain a firm friend of them. He was cured more than twenty years ago, and there has been no return of the trouble. I shall be glad to have you publish this true statement of his cure." (Signed) Mrs. M. C. Maitland, Jasper Ontario, May 27, 1910.

Cuticura Remedies afford the most economical treatment for affections of the skin and scalp. A cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient. Sold everywhere. PASSAGE OF RECIPROCITY BILL, UNAMENDED, DEMANDED IN HOUSE RESOLUTION

Following the arraignment of Senator Lodge by Speaker Walker in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, Henry G. Wells, a Representative from Haverhill, introduced the following order:

Ordered, by the House of Representatives that it is the sense of this body:

First, that the reciprocity bill with Canada negotiated by President Taft and now pending in Congress is, in its present form, of benefit to this Commonwealth and to the political and commercial relations of our country and Canada.

Second, That the amendments to the treaty should be regarded as injurious to its ratification.

Third, That the clerk of the House of Representatives be and is hereby ordered to transmit a copy of this order to the Senators from Massachusetts in Congress.

Legislature Aroused by Lodge Opposition to the Battle of Reciprocity; Resentment to "Hostile" Attitude of "Statesman from Nahant" Is Now Taking Firm Root at the State House

Beacon Hill fairly teemed to-day with reciprocity talk. The feeling among the Republican members of Senate and House against the attitude of Senator Lodge gave promise of smashing what little there is left of allegiance to the Nahant statesman.

Men who owe their positions to Lodge were about the State House sounding sentiment. It was observed that J. Otis Wardwell of Haverhill, the former Republican State committeeman, who has always been Lodge's man in the lobby, was back again in his old haunts. It was apparent, however, that neither he nor any of his lobby associates could stem the tide of public disapproval of Lodge's attitude.

Speaker Joseph Walker is the "man of the hour" at the State House, and it was evident from the reports brought to the Capitol by the country members to-day that he is the "man of the hour" elsewhere. The farmers were reported to have opened their eyes to the way in which they are being made the "goats" by the lumber trust and the paper trust in Washington.

Wells Order Before House.

The first business before the House when it comes in at 2 o'clock this afternoon is the order offered by Representative Henry G. Wells of Haverhill, upholding President Taft, denouncing the Root, Lodge or any other amendment as "hostile" and providing for formal notice to Senator Lodge that the House of Representatives which elected him do not purpose to stand for his proposed action.

The Wells amendment, coming right on top of Speaker Walker's second defi to Lodge, caused all sorts of excitement. Wells has never acted in a matter to justify his being called a howling insurgent. On a pinch, in most matters, he would be counted on to stand with Lodge. His reciprocity order is looked upon as an indication of how widespread the feeling among the people is against the Lodge attitude.

There was little doubt about the State House to-day that Representative Wells's order would be whooped through, and that before nightfall an official letter would be on the way to Senator Lodge from Clerk Kimball of the House, notifying him that body insists that he stand with the President for the treaty and against amendments.

The Wells order is as follows:

Text of the Order.

Ordered by the House of Representatives that it is the sense of this body:

First, that the reciprocity bill with Canada negotiated by President Taft and now pending in Congress is, in its present form, of benefit to this Commonwealth and to the political and commercial relations of our country and Canada.

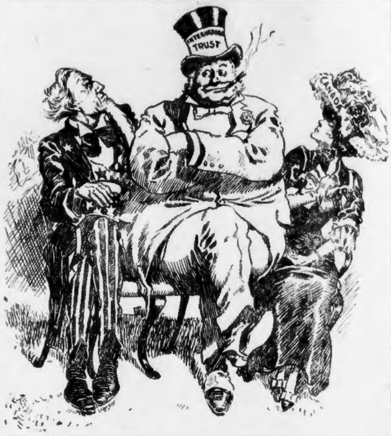
Second, That the amendments to the treaty should be regarded as injurious to its ratification.

Third, That the clerk of the House of Representatives be and is hereby ordered to transmit a copy of this order to the senators from Massachusetts in Congress.

Speaker Walker to-day was anxiously awaiting a reply to his letter to Senator Lodge. The letter was sent last Saturday. It demanded that the senior Senator stand by the promises he made, when he was seeking re-election, to support reciprocity, and reminded him that supporting amendments is not supporting reciprocity.

Pending a reply from Senator Lodge, the Speaker has issued a statement which he hopes will set to rest the statements from Washington and elsewhere that his motive in making a fight for reciprocity is a political one. He informs the public that his knowledge of the case comes from Mr. Lodge's own self, that Mr. Lodge promised him last Winter that he would support reciprocity, that Mr. Lodge recently informed him he would vote for amendments to the reciprocity bill, and suggests that the two statements are not consistent.

"Two's Company; Three's a Crowd"



FOSS SUED BY COTTON MEN

Governor Foss was sued to-day for $7,000 by Frank A. Cummings of Woburn and Ralph H. Hubbard of New York composing the Boston brokerage firm of Cummings & Hubbard. They allege that Governor Foss owes them for commissions earned by carrying for him a large speculative account in cotton.

The accounts carried by the Governor in the National Shawmut Bank and the New England Trust Company in Boston have been attached, but the papers in the suit are filed in the Norfolk County Superior Court at Dedham, the Governor being a Summer resident of Cohasset.

According to the brokers, whose action is one of breach of contract, Mr. Foss has already paid to them in commissions the sum of $46,735. They claim that the entire amount of his indebtedness is $50,705, but that he has refused to settle the remaining claim of $3,970. The agreement was abrogated February 28, 1911.

The papers in the suit set forth that in October, 1909, Mr. Foss entered into an agreement with the brokers whereby they were to carry for him a speculative, open, running account for the purchase and sale of cotton. On every hundred bales bought or sold, they assert, they were to receive a commission of $7.50. This would make the Governor's transactions in cotton through the single brokerage house amount to more than 675,000 bales.

BOSTON & MAINE SUED FOR $300,000

The Converse Rubber Shoe Company of Malden filed to-day a suit against the Boston & Maine Railroad in the East Cambridge court. The action is for $300,000, and the plaintiff company alleges that a large storehouse and much merchandise was destroyed on February 2, 1911, by fire which started from a spark of a locomotive on the defendant road.

SOUTHERN FARMERS FOR RECIPROCITY

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

(Editorial Correspondence of the Boston AMERICAN.)

ATLANTA, June 7.—The seventy-five thousand members of the farmers' union in Georgia, fairly and overwhelmingly representative of two hundred thousand farmers of the State, sent to-day to the AMERICAN through their official and trusted representative their assurance that the agricultural mass of Georgia, which is the representative State of the South, heartily and enthusiastically indorsed the House bill on reciprocity.

After all the subterfuge and false representations of the Lumber Trust and of the Paper Trust, answers are coming thick and fast to prove that the good sense of the producers stand for reciprocity, indorsed by the Democratic party and by the Republican President.

A week ago a Chicago newspaper polled the agricultural newspapers and officials of the central and further West, and 73 per cent, declared for reciprocity. Only 27 per cent, in all that great region represented a sporadic protest against it.

So I have come to the South, which has the largest farmers' organization in the country, which is essentially an agricultural section, to discover that here too, the Lumber Trust and the Paper Trust have grossly misrepresented the patriotism and justice of the American farmer. There are about 400,000 members of the American Grange. There are about 100,000 bona fide representatives of the Society of Equity, representing the farmers of the Middle States, and there are 1,000,000 paid subscribers, and 2,500,000 general subscribers to the National Farmers' Union, which was founded in the South, and whose president, Charles S. Barrett, now on his way to Oregon, is a resident farmer of the State of Georgia.

"Delay Inexcusable."

Of all the States Georgia is perhaps most representative of the sentiments in the agricultural masses in the South and America. Here then to-day, I present through the AMERICAN the choices of the 75,000 members of the Farmers' Union in Georgia, fairly representing the spirit of the 2,500,000 representatives of the Farmers' Union throughout the country.

In brief paragraphs let us carry the spirit and the message of this magnificent body of men. First comes Hoke Smith, Governor-elect of Georgia by an enormous agricultural vote and a most enthusiastic farmer. Hoke Smith said to me for the AMERICAN to-day:

"I am thoroughly in sympathy with the patriotic course of the majority of the members of the House of Representatives which passed the reciprocity bill without undertaking to handicap it by amendments. I cordially favor its speedy passage without change by the Senate, and so far I can judge, this is the OVERWHELMING VIEW OF THE PEOPLE of this section of the Union. TO DELAY A VOTE UPON THIS MEASURE IS INEXCUSABLE."

"It Is the People's Measure."

Next comes Thomas J. Hudson, the able and popular State Commissioner of Agriculture. Mr. Hudson says, "As a representative of the agricultural interests I am whole-heartedly in favor of the fight of the AMERICAN for reciprocity. It is the people's measure; it is also the farmers' measure. Let the Senate pass it without amendment. That is what the people demand."

If it be argued that these are political expressions from public men and those who might be deemed partisans or politicians let us get down then, to the real thing in agriculture.

I place upon the witness stand Emmett Cabaniss, president of the Farmers' Union of Georgia, 75,000 strong. Mr. Cabaniss is himself a farmer of high standing and repute, one of the strongest men in thought and in influence in the State. He is in every sense a representative man, coming from one of the oldest and strongest agricultural strains of the State and is a leader and a thinker as well.

Will Enlarge Our Trade.

Mr. Cabaniss said to me to-day: "I most heartily favor the bill for Canadian reciprocity reported from the House to the American Senate. I believe it will be the best thing for the American farmer and the best thing for the people. I have for some years protested against the extravagant prices put upon the necessities of life, while so many luxuries go untaxed, and I think it will inure to the subsequent and permanent good of all classes if there shall be a lowering of the cost of living and the necessities of life.

"I believe in the enlargement of our markets and therefore the enlargement of our trade. I think that when the farmer has the markets of the world open to his produce, our really permanent prosperity will begin. I believe that the farmers of Georgia will heartily indorse Canadian reciprocity and that, if their voice could be heard, it would unanimously appeal for a prompt vote by the American Senate on the reciprocity bill without any attempt to destroy it by amendments or delay. The people demand of the Senate a prompt vote upon the reciprocity bill as it came from the Democratic House of Representatives."

Protests Against Trickery.

Colonel W. L. Peek of Rockdale, is vice-president of the 75,000 members of the Farmers' Union in Georgia. He is a man of sterling character and of high repute among the great agricultural interests of his class. He is a thoughtful man, a publicist and a patriot. His high integrity and his devotion to a great interest have made his name a power among the farmers of the South. Colonel Peek declares:

"I cannot see why the Senate should hesitate or delay an affirmative vote on reciprocity. It is the will of the people; it is the will of the Democratic House, and and it is the desire of the President and it is clearly and distinctly in the real interests of the farmers of the South and of the whole country and should be promptly considered and passed upon by the Senate. I protest against all delays. I protest against all subterfuge and the tricky amendments that are designed to dismember, and I sincerely hope that every Southern Senator and every Democratic Senator will promptly record himself in favor of the measure."

Dr. Bradford Its Champion.

Dr. William Bradford of Polk County is a tower of strength to the farmers' interests of North Georgia, a man of culture and brains, of deep thought and of blameless character. His words always have weight in the agricultural interests and the political interests of the State. Dr. Bradford is the chairman of the executive committee of the State Farmers' Union of Georgia. This is what Dr. Bradford says:

"Do I favor the Canadian reciprocity measure? To be sure I do just as heartily as the AMERICAN does. It is a promising beginning to such legislation as we have been praying for for fifty years or more; a gratifying start in the right direction. And the beginning is made at the right place—with our nearest and best neighbor, and touches articles of prime necessity. There is practically no sentiment against it in this region. What is the matter with the Senate? Surely they have not heard from home lately. Let them act promptly and favorably on the people's bill. The farmers ask it."

From the trusted officials of the Farmers' Union, who are also among the soundest and most influential citizens of the State, I pass to the farmers' newspapers.

Take the Southern Ruralist, which has the largest circulation of any agricultural paper in Georgia, or in the South. Thousands of copies are scattered over the five States surrounding Georgia, and its circulation goes far up into the North and Northwest. It is essentially a farmers' newspaper.

Its editor, Francis J. Marram, says: "You cannot quote me too heartily in favor of the prompt passage of the reciprocity bill by the Senate. I know that the farmers of the South and of the country are in favor of that measure, because it is in favor of the farmers. We distrust all amendments that destroy and delay. We desire a vote upon the reciprocity bill as it came from the House of Representatives, and we are willing to trust Congress for a vote upon the farmers' free list when this first break has been made in the wall of tariff legislation. The Ruralist appeals to the Senate for a prompt and definite vote on the House bill. It thanks the AMERICAN for its splendid activity."

Then comes G. F. Hunnicutt, editor of the Southern Cultivator, the oldest and, in many respects, the strongest and most beloved agricultural publication in Georgia and its surrounding territory. The Hunnicutts have been for generations the newspaper representatives of farmers' interests in Georgia. Editor Hunnicutt declares:

"I favor Canadian reciprocity. I believe the people need it. I believe the farmers will profit by it. I like the bill passed by an overwhelming majority by a Democratic House. In behalf of the agriculture of the State and of the South I ask the Senate to consider the unamended bill promptly, and to give us a clear and definite vote upon it at an early date."

There is nothing left to be added to such testimony as this. The representative men of Georgia, of all classes, and of all shades of political belief are the most careful men in the world in expressing opinions on matters that touch the interests of the great classes that they represent. These men would not speak as they do if they did not believe and know that reciprocity looked to the permanent and ultimate good of the southern and American farmer.

A FEELING OF SECURITY

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

DESTRUCTION BY MICE.

Mice are easily gotten rid of by use of Rough on Rats; which is not poisonous to handle, only so when eaten. If for a few mice use a much less quantity, but if overrun with mice mix say as much Rough on Rats powder as would lay on a five-cent nickel piece, or half of a level teaspoon with two heaping tablespoons of butter or lard or other grease; mix it thoroughly in a saucer, then on slices of bread cut thin spread the mixture thinly over the bread in all its parts and work it into the fibre of the bread, then cut the bread in little half to one inch squares and place these about in cupboards, closets, bureau drawers, etc., and your mouse trouble will be over for a long time. A 25-cent box of Rough on Rats should keep your house or barn free from mice one to three years. It is equally effective for Roaches, Ants, Bedbugs, Flies, Prairie Dogs, all "varmint." Rough on Rats is not a catch-penny, money-making pretence, it is a proven thing of merit, a sure thing, the old reliable, unbeatable exterminator, that fools the Rats, Mice and Bugs, but never fools or disappoints the buyer.

ROUGH ON RATS IN OUT-BUILDINGS.

In setting Rough on Rats in outbuildings, after mixing it well with any food decided upon, separate into small bits, place on several pieces of boards, and put these here and there under the floors. Close up all openings large enough for Dogs, Cats or Chickens to enter, but leave some small openings, for Rats to get in and out. Or place the doses you have prepared on the floor, cover them over with a large flat box, having cut holes in the lower edge of the box just large enough for Rats to get in and out. One 25c box of Rough on Rats, being all (95%) poison, will make enough mixture to clear out in one or two nights setting thousands of Rats and Mice. Mix it 1 to 15 to 20 of food used for Rats and 1 to 40 to 50 for Mice. See directions for Prairie Dogs and other "varmint," Roaches, Ants, Bed Bugs, Flies, etc., 15c., 25c., 75c. at Druggists'. E. S. ST. LOUIS BROWNS OPEN AGAINST THE RED SOX

By R. W. LARDNER.

The Red Sox won't be able to take four straight from St. Louis this trip. They will be perfectly satisfied if they can cop three, for there is a chance that Bobby Wallace's people will offer some very stern resistance and object to a whitewash.

So long as a team has good pitchers it is worthy of some respect. Pelty, Powell and Lake are the strong men on Wallace's staff and any one of them is likely to turn in a shut-out. It's a hard feat to win a game without scoring, so it behooves the Sox to pile up a tally or two no matter how well their own hurlers are going.

Just at present, Harry Hooper is one of the most competent laborers in this task of scoring. Harry is punishing that baseball and starting rallies and swatfests at an interesting rate. Hooper is a graceful batter like Honus Wagner. He looks as if he were off his balance, but pitchers are going to find out that he isn't if they try to trifle with him. Harry hits in all direction, and outfielders don't know much about playing for him. The best way for them to do at present is to stand where they pick up their gloves and start for the fence when the pitcher winds up. If Mr. Hooper can keep on going at this pace, Speaker, Lewis and Engle can afford to lay off for awhile and save their swatting for days when it is needed more.

Boston Fans Loyal.

Boston's baseball bugs are certainly stickers, but they are inconsistent for all that. They will turn out and pull for their team no matter how bad it may be. If it is licked, they say unkind things about it, but they're right out there next day pulling again.

In the case of the Red Sox, in the anxiety to see Patsy's club win every game, they have probably overlooked the things the team has actually accomplished. Weakened by all manner of accidents and illnesses, it has won five more games than it has lost, and has made a better showing than New York or Chicago, both strong clubs. It is no disgrace to be behind Detroit or Philadelphia. The Tigers were not troubled by injuries at the start and their pitchers were going well. They acquired a big lead and it is only natural that they did so. As for the Athletics, they were bound to come up because they had the class. Nothing but broken arms and legs can prevent them from finishing one-two-three, and Boston ought to be content if it can land as high as third.

Nevertheless, Red Sox fans will not be perfectly happy unless the club climbs to the top and stays there. But whether they are happy or not, they will go right on attending the games, pulling hard for victory and doing a little harmless hammering when the athletes slump. Perhaps this city of ours wouldn't go crazy if it could boast of two pennant winners in one season.

Tigers Here Saturday.

There's going to be something doing here next Saturday afternoon. On that day and date, H. Jennings and the terrible Tigers will be here to start a fight against the Speed Boys and everybody in town who can grab a ticket will hustle into the park on Huntington avenue to see the fun.

Boston has been reading all Spring of the gallant deeds of the Tigers and they are crazy to see for themselves what sort of man-eaters Hughey has in this year's menagery. T. Cobb is whaling over .400 and his erstwhile enemy, Sam Crawford, isn't far behind. Whatever people say about Cobb they must admit that he can play ball and also that he can draw crowds. He is pulling down about $9,000 per season and every penny of that sum is returned at the box office by folks who are attracted solely by him.

Every night before he retires Frank Navin warbles a hymn of thanksgiving to the kindly fate that gave him Tyrus, nor does he feel a pang of regret when he signs the fat check that is handed to the Georgia Peach twice a month.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

MACK SIGNS UP MEDFORD BOY

HANOVER, N. H., June 7.—Unless he suddenly changes his mind, Chet Emerson, captain of the Dartmouth baseball team, will to-day be enrolled as a member of the Philadelphia Athletics. He is expected to sign a contract to-day.

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, sized up the Dartmouth leader in the game with Harvard, and pronounced him fit for fast company. Negotiations were immediately opened toward signing the crack outfielder, and, as usual, Manager Mack got the man he was after.

Emerson is one of the steadiest outfielders in the college ranks this year, and many big league scouts have given him their stamp of approval, although no overtures were made toward securing his services until Connie Mack took the initiative. If Emerson makes good, as the experts predict he will, it will be another ten-strike for Connie in his invasion into the hotbed of major league scouts in New England in plucking a promising player "right under their noses."

Chester Arthur Emerson lives in Medford, Mass., and prepared at Medford High School, where he starred as a ball player. He has been a member of the Dartmouth varsity team four years. He is a fast man on the bases. He is a left-hand batter and right-hand thrower.

ST. LOUIS, June 7.—The elements were working overtime during the early morning, and Secretary Seekamp, the watchdog of the Cardinals' treasury, decided at the last moment to call all hostilities off, as the prospective attendance looked unprofitable, although the weather had cleared and the sun was shining.

Manager Tenney, although somewhat perturbed as well as discouraged at the poor showing of his aggregation, expressed himself as hopeful, saying that ill luck had been a constant attendant since leaving Boston, and he felt things would materially change in the near future.

Tenney concluded by remarking that his pitchers were in a rut, and could not be depended upon at any stage of the game, citing the unparalleled catastrophe in Cincinnati, Sunday, registering a new record in baseball for the season and placing, as Fred asserts, a scar on his management that will dim his career for months to come.

Today's game will bring forth Harmon as Bresnahan's twirler, while Ferguson is booked for similar duty for the visitors.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Hub Perdue will be tried out as soon as the Rustlers return from the West. He will be asked to go into one of the New York games for three or four innings. If his arm hurts him, he will be sent home to rest for the balance of the season. If it doesn't, he will be given a regular turn, and it's a safe bet that the enemy won't find him less effective than the others on Tenney's staff.

* * *

According to American League batsmen who have had the misfortune to face Joe Wood, this young man is every bit as fast as Walter Johnson ever was. Joe has a curve ball, but he could probably get along very well without it. There are some pitchers whose speed becomes hitable when the batters have looked it over for five or six innings. But the hitters are as much in the air against Joe at the finish as at the start, provided he doesn't let up.

* * *

Every little while, when the New York Giants are playing in the West, one picks up a Western sporting sheet and reads that Mathewson will be used in the Sunday game against so-and-so. As a matter of fact, Big Six has never pitched a Sunday game in his life and doesn't intend to start the habit. This makes his sobriquet, "Big Six," doubly appropriate, for he works only six days a week.

* * *

Josh Clark has been hitting hard and fielding nicely since he went back to St. Paul. He slumped badly here and acted as if something serious ailed him. Chances are it was homesickness and he has picked up now because he is within riding distance of his own fireside and can spend his evenings and off days there.

* * *

Base running ability and speed on the bases are funny things. Ty Cobb probably can go around the paths faster than any ball player in the land, but it is doubtful if he could beat Hans Lobert in a straightaway race of 100 yards or so. Jimmy Block, the White Sox catcher, has no speed at all on the bases, but he is a fairly fast man straightaway. John Kling of the Chicago Cubs can beat a lot of his mates in a regular race, but he looks like a hearse on the sacks.

* * *

There have been only four postponements in Boston this season. The game scheduled for April 20 between the Red Sox and Athletics was called off on account of rain, hail and general defectiveness in the weather conditions. The only other Huntington avenue postponement was that of yesterday's game with the Browns. The Rustlers have battles left over from their Chicago and Philadelphia series. This is a good record for a city where Spring is supposed to arrive late.

* * *

During the first game this season between the Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Naps, Joe Jackson sought out Ty Cobb and said: "There's nothing in baseball that you have on me. I can do everything you can do and I'm going to prove it." Ty told him to go ahead and Joe has been following orders. He was peeved because the critics opined that he wouldn't have led the American League in hitting last season if he had been in the game longer.

* * *

Sometimes a pitcher's control is too good. This is one of the troubles with old Cy Young, who has announced his intention of retiring. Cy was so true that batters faced him with confidence, knowing that they were in no danger of being "beaned." Of course, this was only during the latter part of Cy's career. There was a time when the strongest feeling in the souls of the batters who faced Cy was one of absolute hopelessness.

PLAY OVER GAME CUBS PROTESTED

NEW YORK, June 7.—President Thomas J. Lynch of the National League threw out the Chicago-Pittsburg game of the morning of May 30, which Chicago had protested, and ordered the game played over.

"This game," says President Lynch in his decision allowing Chicago's protest, "was won by the Pittsburg club by 1 to 0 and protested by the Chicago club on the grounds, first, that the field umpire called the wrong player out and that, second, as a result of said decision a second runner was wrongly declared out by the umpire-in-chief.

"In the eighth inning Shean of Chicago was on first base with one out. Archer hit a fly ball to the infield which was dropped by Wagner and the ball was thrown to second for a force-out. With both Shean and Archer holding first base, field umpire erred in calling Archer out claiming that Wagner had intentionally dropped the ball.

After Doyle had told Archer he was out and had ordered him to leave the base, Manager Clarke of Pittsburg appealed to Umpire-in-Chief Klem that Doyle's decision was wrong and that Shean should have been declared out. Archer, in the meantime, having left first base, as directed, was touched with the ball and also declared out by Umpire Klem.

"A careful investigation shows that the field umpire erred in calling Archer out instead of Shean, and that Umpire-in-Chief Klem likewise erred in allowing the second put-out. The only decision Umpire Klem should have made on Manager Clarke's appeal was to reverse Doyle's decision and call Shean out and send Archer back to first.

"The evidence clearly shows that both umpires erred and that by reason thereof an injustice was done to the Chicago club. The protest is allowed and the game as played is stricken from the records and ordered to be replayed.

By TED PARKE.

For the first time since 1906, Harvard and Pennsylvania will meet in baseball this afternoon on Soldiers Field at 4 o'clock. Athletic relations have been in abeyance between these two colleges since 1906, when trouble arose and only this year have the two colleges come to an agreement.

The last time Harvard met the Quakers, the Crimson won out 4 to 1. This year it does not look as though the result would come out very favorably for Harvard, for the Cambridge team seems to have struck a bad spot in the going just at present, and Pennsy is apt to prove another rough proposition, for the team has been fairly successful this year, defeating Holy Cross and Yale, and breaking even with Princeton, although Brown, recently defeated by Harvard, took the measure of the Philadelphians decisively.

As a result of the catastrophe last Saturday when Dartmouth did things to Harvard, the Crimson lineup has been considerably changed as well as the batting order. Clifford and Rogers have been relegated, while Babson has been sent into the field as well as Wigglesworth. Babson starts the list in batting. Captain McLaughlin has been shifted to right, the first time this year, Hann being back at first, having recovered from the injury to his hand.

McKay may twirl for Harvard to-day. There is also a possibility that a new man may show his curves to the visitors. This is Sexton, who has been on the mound for the second team. He has developed good steam and some fancy twists, and he may come in handy this afternoon in repelling the Quakers from the Crimson loot. Imlay, the star slab artist for the Pennsylvania lads, will be on the mound for them and should trouble Harvard batters considerably.

STRIKE AT POLO GROUNDS.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Work on the new grandstand at the Polo ground will be stopped to-day, when several hundred men employed in rebuilding the structure go on strike because of a dispute between the structural iron workers and the metal workers as to the right to put in the steel rods for the concrete which is being used in the construction.

KEADY FOR N. E. LEAGUE.

Tom Keady, the Dartmouth College athletic trainer and baseball coach, has been offered an umpire's berth in the New England League. Keady has the matter under advisement and will probably accept the offer.

Bernhardt seat sale opens tomorrow morning 9 o'clock. Boston Theatre.

PAPKE AND SULLIVAN BATTLE FOR A TITLE

Billy Papke and Jim Sullivan will meet in London to-morrow night for the middleweight championship of the world.

Of course there are several boxers over on these shores who will dispute the title of the winner but the bout will be for the championship of England anyway and the winner will have a right to extend his claim.

Sullivan is the holder of the Lord Lonsdale belt for that class. The bout has the Englishmen "standing on their heads" with excitement and the promoters are ready to handle a record-breaking crowd.

All on this side of the pond are familiar with the abilities of the American boxer. He is the one man who put the K. O. over on the late Stanley Ketchel. He is the nearest man to the title and many think that he is the best. He claims it. Billy was recently defeated by "Cyclone Johnny" Thompson in Australia but he was purely out of condition and the pugilistic followers have excused him from that defeat. Papke came back strong after that battle and beat Jim Smith, the Australian middleweight, and since then he has been in the best standing.

Jim Sullivan is practically a new name to the American boxing followers. He was heard from but a few times until he won over Tom Thomas for the middleweight championship of the British islands, and since then he has been boomed as a "beastly cleva' boxer" by the English sportsmen. Sullivan is a good man—one of the best who has been on the British shores for many years, and many predict that he will give the American a hard battle. He is being well supported to beat the "Illinois Thunderbolt." The odds are small, with Papke a slight favorite.

The bout is advertised as a real world's middleweight championship battle, and the Englishmen are bears at that sort of stuff. A bigger attendance than that of the Langford-Lang bout is predicted, and the prices are scaling at the same price, $5 to $50.

How the Middleweights Compare in the Ring

PAPKE'S BEST FIGHTS.

Terry Martin, k. o., Philadelphia, three rounds.

Hugo Kelly, w., Milwaukee, ten rounds.

Stanley Ketchell, k. o., Colma, twelve rounds.

Hugo Kelly, k. o., Los Angeles one round.

Willie Lewis, k. o., Paris, three rounds.

Defeated Jim Smith for Australian middleweight title 1911.

SULLIVAN'S BEST FIGHT.

Beat Tom Thomas for middleweight championship of England.

PAPKE IS AFTER LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE HELD BY SULLIVAN

By ED. W. SMITH.

That Billy Papke is extremely confident of winning over Jim Sullivan, English champion, in their battle to-morrow night in London is shown by a letter just received from the Kewanee man. Papke is going ahead with plans for a match here, and writes that he would like nothing better than to arrange a ten-round encounter with Hugo Kelly for Milwaukee on the afternoon of July 4.

That's going some for a man at that distance, but it shows that Bill is eager to get busy with some of the good men of this country immediately upon his return to the States.

It is doubtful if the Milwaukee promoters could secure a stronger card unless it might be the one proposed between Packey McFarland and Matt Wells, the English champion.

Fails to Mention Weight.

Papke writes a ten-page letter on the left-handed paper in vogue on the other side, but a careful perusal of the whole fails to uncover a single reference to the matter of Papke's weight. Either Billy is not much concerned about the matter or he is covering it up by absolute silence. It is likely that Billy doesn't know that everybody is guessing about the matter over here, hence doesn't see why he should speak about it.

The English middleweight encounter was set back a couple of days, and will be decided in the Palladium, one of the finest places in London, under the management of Hugh McIntosh. The only reference Billy makes to weight in his letter is the statement that he and Sullivan agreed to make 160 pounds at 2 o'clock. But he doesn't even say that it will be hard for him, or easy, or what.

Paris Match Falls Through.

Bill didn't get that match in Paris with Marcel Moreau that he expected. It was to have been decided a week ago to-night. Papke writes in part as follows:

"Delaying writing until I could tell you something of that fight I was to have had in Paris. But it fell through, or rather was postponed for a time, till after my battle with Jim Sullivan. It has been tough picking here, without anybody to look after my business, but I think I am all right now and going along in good shape.

"The London fight is signed up for the 8th and surely will take place in a big music hall called the Palladium, one of the best places here.

"If I am successful I have a chance to sign up for a forty-week engagement with a certain American theatrical manager, and may take it. So you can see that I am looking forward to this match with Sullivan as something of real importance.

Kelly Looks Best, He Says.

"Kelly looks to me to be best of the middleweights now at home and I wish I could get a match with him for July 4 in Milwaukee or some place close to Chicago. We would go big in Milwaukee. I am sure."

ANDY MORRIS ON WAY TO PORTLAND ARENA

Andy Morris of East Boston will leave for Portland, Me., to-day and there finish his training for his contest with Al Benedict, which will be decided in the Auditorium next Saturday night. Morris is in excellent shape for the bout. He has been training under the direction of George Byers and Joe Hicks.

Morris has been informed that if he loses, his bout with Jim Savage, scheduled for Brown's Gym in New York next Tuesday night, will be called off.

Benedict will report in Portland Friday morning. He is in good shape and he expects to win from Morris.

JEFFRIES GOING ON ALASKA TRIP

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—Jack Jeffries, brother of James J. Jeffries, once heavyweight champion, announced to-day that the champion is now on his way home from his short European trip and that, travelling by easy stages, he will reach this city on the morning of July 5. He has not changed his plans regarding the European tour, but is travelling on the original schedule.

When he left Los Angeles it was arranged for him to go to Alaska on a hunting trip in July in company with Hopperstead and other friends, including Barney Oldfield, and that trip will be taken. Jeff would not pass up a big game hunting trip for a tour of the world. He is coming back home by easy stages, and will arrive in 'Frisco in time to attend the Wolgast-Moran fight.

He is a great admirer of Wolgast and is arranging his plans to be at ringside when he meets the Briton. He will come to Los Angeles immediately after the fight and in a short time afterward will start for Alaska. Mrs. Jeffries will not stay in Europe without Jeff and is expected back at the same time. Barney Oldfield is arranging his affairs so he can take the Alaskan trip.

DOUBLE WRESTLING CARD AT COLUMBIA

An unusual amount of interest has developed among wrestling fans over the big double card offered by Manager Farren of the Columbia for Friday night, and the outlook is bright for another crowded house when John Perelli and Cyclone Burns, and Sam Anderson and Jim Prokos pair off in two big finish matches that should abound in thrills, clever wrestling and mat generalship of a high order. It is almost an unheard of thing for the fans to be treated to two finish matches in one evening, particularly when there are such high-class artists involved, and that the fans appreciate it is shown by the immense advance demand for seats.

GLOVER WILLING TO MEET MATT WELLS

Johnny Glover of South Boston is training as never before. The South Boston lightweight meets Johnny Stewart at Portland next Saturday night, and is very anxious to be returned a winner. Glover will try his best to make the win decisive, as he wants to meet Nat Wells, the English champion, who will appear in this city in the near future. Glover's recent wins over Tommy Howell, Young Erne and Tommy Carey, together with several others of lesser note throughout Pennsylvania, would entitle him to some consideration. Glover would meet Wells to-night if he could get the chance.

VIC WILLIS KEEPING HIS ARM IN SHAPE

Vic Willis, the famous National league pitcher, who was here with the Boston Nationals, when in the zenith of his diamond career, is feeling the call to the game again and is decidedly uneasy not to be pitching this year for the first time in thirteen seasons. Willis is now a boniface in Wilmington, Del., his home town, but has not been keeping his twirling arm in trim and now longs to sniff the smoke of battle again. Wilmington is in the Tri-State league and he would be more than pleased to be permitted to pitch one or two of Wilmington's home games every week.

WELLS-MOORE BOUT ARRANGED

Matt Wells, the English lightweight champion, has been matched to meet Pal Moore of Philadelphia in the main bout of twelve rounds at the Armory A. A. on next Tuesday evening, June 18. The preliminaries have not yet been announced.

Bouts of this kind are rare occasions in Boston and this one should attract a lot of attention. Wells was hailed the lightweight champion of England when he beat Freddy Welsh on English soil. He has been in this country but a couple of weeks, and has a decision over Leach Cross in ten rounds.

Pal Moore, the Philadelphia boy boxer, is one of the cleverest in the game to-day and should be able to give a good account of himself against the Britisher. Moore is not like Murphy in passing up good opportunities to win titles, and he gladly accepted the chance to meet Wells.

Though Wells has a fine reputation, it did not frighten Moore, who is a great favorite with the fans in this city. The local followers of the game have been anxious to see Wells in action, for they figured he must be a great boxer to wrest the English title from Freddie Welsh.

If Wells defeats Moore he will know that he has been in a scrap, for Moore is one of the best lightweights in this country. The way that Wells polished off Leach Cross in New York last week shows that he is a classy boxer. There will be three preliminaries by local talent.

FIGHTERS COMING HOME FROM EUROPE

PHILADELPHIA, June 7.—Three Philadelphia fighters who have had successful campaigns in Europe are on the high seas homeward bound and will arrive here before the week ends. They are Harry Lewis, Al Lippe, his manager, and the Loughrey brothers, Tom and Frank.

Lewis and Lippe sailed from England on the Adriatic last Wednesday, and the Loughreys joined them when the Adriatic called at Queenstown, Ire. The Loughreys left Paris ahead of time in order to spend a week in Ireland. Had they sidestepped the visit to Ireland, they would never have been permitted to return to Manayunk.

SALLAWAY CAPTAIN OF COMMERCE TEAM

George Sallaway of Roxbury was unanimously elected captain of the High School of Commerce track team for 1912 yesterday afternoon. For the last three years he has been prominent in athletics at the school. The following Commerce track athletes were awarded letters: J. J. Donnelly, George Sallaway, Chester J. Grenier, Elmer Smith, Maurice Connors, Ray Shanahan, Walter Ryan, James Horn, J. H. Sullivan, Charles de Coursey and Manager Albert Rolfe.

PLAN BIG FIGHT FOR LABOR DAY

"Jack Johnson and Sam Langford are likely to meet Labor Day at Badensburg, half way between Baltimore and Washington," said Joe Woodman, manager of Langford, to-day, in partial confirmation of a report from Washington.

"The Maryland Legislature passed a law permitting boxing contests. Four men in Washington and Baltimore are now trying to find out if, under that law, the Governor will stand for a boxing bout between Johnson and Langford. They have opened negotiations for the men, but they are held up while they wait to see what the Governor says. They have enough money to stage such a bout.

"Their idea is to put up an arena like the one at Reno, and they figure they can take in $100,000 gate money for a limited contest, say of fifteen or twenty rounds. Their plan is to give Johnson $50,000 outright for his end of it. I understand they have already made him that offer and that he is likely to accept it, but of course you would have to rely on his word to be sure of it.

"Before Johnson sailed for England he said that he might be gone six months, but I have seen a telegram from Tom Flanagan, who sailed with him, saying that he actually expected to return in August and that he would come back then on account of the Badensburg proposition.

"If the Governor will stand for a contest there, it ought to be a paying proposition, as the place is only about a half hour from Washington and an equal distance from Baltimore."

DARTMOUTH JOINS BASKETBALL LEAGUE

PHILADELPHIA, June 7.—As a result of a mail vote taken since the annual Spring meeting in March, Dartmouth College, it was announced by Secretary Ralph Morgan of this city, had been admitted to membership in the Intercollegiate Basket Ball League, which heretofore has been composed of five universities—Yale, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Cornell and Columbia.

The intercollegiate league will hold a special meeting in New York on June 15 to rearrange next year's schedule.

BOUTS TO-NIGHT.

BALDWIN-WELSH GO IS NOT SURE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7.—Considerable doubt is expressed in fight circles here as to whether Promoter Milton T. Clark will be able to pull off the Matty Baldwin-Freddy Welsh bout announced by him for the latter part of the month. Down in Los Angeles McCarey is claiming that he has Freddie Welsh's promise for a bout with Johnny McCarthy about the same time and it is obvious that one or the other of the contests will fall through. Although transportation for two was forwarded to the Boston boxer at Indianapolis several days ago by Clark, no articles of agreement have as yet been signed.

DORMAN AND BURNS DRAW

NEW YORK, June 7.—Jack Dorman of the Bronx and Kid Burns of the West Side fought ten hard rounds to a draw at Brown's gymnasium.

KNIGHT A CINCH FOR M'FARLAND

CLEVELAND, June 7.—Phil Knight acceptably filled the position of a punching bag in his ten-round bout with Packey McFarland at the Eagles' Club. Knight staid the ten rounds, but beyond giving him credit for his willingness to act as a human target it is impossible to say anything in his favor.

It was a one-man fight, with McFarland doing all the punishing from first to last. The Leavenworth man didn't have a single chance. He couldn't get near enough, in the first place, and in the second he was pitted against a past master, who made him the butt of all the concentrated abuse that can be dispensed by the hand of man in an argument of the fists.

JOY RIDING IN THE CAB.

PITTSBURG, June 7.—When the New York National league team arrived here from Chicago, it was discovered that "Bugs" Raymond had disappeared en route.

The members of the team were greatly mystified until it was learned that for the last two hours of the trip from the West Raymond had ridden in the cab with the engineer, with whom he formerly worked years ago in the railroad business.

Wasps	0	0	0	.000

For the benefit of our busy readers who have not had the time to follow closely the league race and other games, we have, after a lot of hard labor, compiled the above mathematical masterpiece entitled "The Standing of the Clubs."

It is all complete and up to date. Not a decimal point is missing (unless the printers get careless), and at a glance any one, whether they are endowed with a talent for figures or not, can see just how things stand in the "Yung Amerika Malgumated National Lege of N. A."

The Starfish Giants and the Umperiners burst out again to-day in another championship series. These championship series are really the only ones that count in the long run, as the team copping most of them gets the pennant at the end of the season.

If we were not absolutely positive that everything is on the level in this league we would start something in the expose line. The Starfish Giants and the Umperiners, playing two championship series in succession, makes it look as if the Wild Cats and the Wasps were laying down on the job for some reason or other.

But as we are personally acquainted with the captain of these two-tail-end teams, we can say without fear of successful contradiction that they have done their level best. Our expert opinion on why they have not won more games is that they have not go the right kind of teams.

"Eagle Beak" Spruder will pitch in to-day's game for the Starfish Giants. He was signed up last evening by "Skinny" Shaner, assisted by Emily Morton.

The following is the line-up of stars who will face each other to-day:

STARFISH GIANTS.		UMPERINGS.
"Eagle Beak" Spruder	p.	"Buck" Osmagan
"Choo Choo" Mavantanza	c.	"Red" Murphy
"Runt"	1b.	"Boob" Nelson (Capt)
"Rat"	2b.	"Gimpy"
"Spike"	3b.	"Dutch"
"Daisy"	s.s.	"Beans"
"Skinny" Shaner (Capt)	l.f.	*"Steeple"
"Brick Top"	c.f.	"Fat"
"Slim"	r.f.	"Dube"
"Rattles"	Mascots.	"Robinson Crusoe No. 2"

*"Steeple" is a substitute, taking "Fish's" place in felt garden for the Umperiners to-day, as the latter has to go downtown this afternoon with his mother to get a straw hat at a fire sale.

When Andy Bore Misfortune

He Cussed Over Annoying Trifles, but Was Like a Rock When the Big Trouble Came

By KENNETT HARRIS

A DELIGHTED grin went around the store circle as the hammering in the back room suddenly ceased and was succeeded by some loud and emphatic remarks in the storekeeper's voice. A few moments later the storekeeper appeared, sucking his thumb, and cut a bandage from the bolt of Indian Head muslin.

"Ain't no question about it, Rufe's drove mules in his day," remarked Eben Baxter. "I wonder what he'd have said if he'd done broke his laig. If anything like that ever happens to him I'd like right well to be around where I could listen to him."

The storekeeper scowled over the knot that he was trying with the help of his teeth. "I hain't never drove no bigger mules than what you are," he retorted. "Another thing, a mule's 'most ginerally got sense, no matter how lop-eared an' wall-eyed he may be—four laigged ones."

"Don't get mad, Rufe," said Washington Hancock. "Eb means well. He's jist foolish. He ain't never learned that it's always [illegible] yer pesky, mean little things that throws a [illegible] off'n his base an' makes him act like a Comanche.

When a feller meets up with sure-enough trouble, it don't seem like it was near as bad. That's what Andy Ettinger used to say when his wife blamed him for takin' on so when he stepped on the blade of a hoe the hired man had left layin' around on the barn floor.

"Ever step on a hoe that-a-way an' have the handle fly up an' crack you over the haid? They heard Andy clear over in the nex' township. What you said wasn't nothin'."

"It wasn't none of you-all's business, nohow," growled the storekeeper.

How Andy Got Worked Up

"That's what Andy told his wife, but he couldn't never get her to believe it," drawled Hancock. "If he picked a red-hot stove lid up off the floor, an' made a few observations about it, she'd ast him if he wasn't ashamed of himse'f, like as not.

"Some women is nacherly that-a-way. They don't never seem to reelize that a man who's picked up a hot stove lid or stubbed his toe, ain't likely to be anythin' but mad for the time bein', an' ain't benefited by havin' his sinfulness pointed out to him.

"But there wasn't no denyin' that Andy did get powerful worked up when things didn't go to suit him; and after a while, when he'd get to meditatin' things over, he'd own right up to it himse'f.

"'But it's these yer mean, pesky little things that riles me up,' he says. 'You wait until suthin big happens an' you'll see how I'll take it. I won't bat an eye,' says he. 'I'll jist keep a stiff upper lip an' say nothin'. You won't hear me belly-achin' an' bawlin'. I ain't that kine. I may rip out a cuss word or two, when the cow kicks over the milk bucket, or holler a little when I feel I hain't bein' treated jist right, but that's nachal. Anybuddy 'll do that, if he's got any spunk, an' it's all over in five minutes anyway, less'n I'm stirred up an prodded.'

"'I hate to hear a man curse and blaspheme,' says she.

"'I jist said "Daggone,"' says Andy. 'That's all I said, excusin' a few other things; but if you'd been totin' two buckets o' water an' the sweat runnin' down your eyes an' a conglomerated fly takin' advantage of the situation, you'd have said suthin', too. If I'd fell down the well I wouldn't have peeped.'

"'Not wishin' you any harm, it would be pleasanter an' less of a disgrace if you did fall down a well or suthin', if suthin' has to be,' says his wife.

"Jest Trifling Annoyances"

"Well, I don't reckon her sayin' that had anythin' to do with it; but it wasn't a week afore Andy lost thirty-two hawgs with the cholera, an' what he said about them hawgs an' the man 'at sold 'em, an' the vetinary he called in, an' the luck that he had with ever'thin' he tetched I wouldn't want to repeat.

"'I thought you was goin' to keep a stiff upper lip when suthin' real serious happened,' says Miz Ettinger, about a month after.

"Andy looked at her a moment an' then took a tumble. 'You don't call losin' a few skinny hawgs anythin' serious, the prices hawgs are fetchin,' do you?' he asts.

"'I allowed it might be,' says she.

"'It's a trifle,' says Andy. 'It ain't reely worth considerin'. A man might jist as well ship a carload of brimstone to Hades as hawgs to Kansas City right now. But it's irritatin' to a feller to have them little things pesterin' him. Like them soft biled aigs this mornin'. Well, I won't say no more about it now. I've eased my mind.'

"That afternoon he fell off the top of the barn an' broke his arm an' collarbone an' three ribs, an' while they was puttin' the arm in plaster the hired man stole a horse an' lit out, leavin' the bay out in a soak of rain.

"It looked like that was enough calamity to make it worth a feller's while to be cheerful; but Andy chewed holes in the bed quilt, he was so mad, an' he cussed an' swore until the doctor threatened to chloroform him.

"The nex' day his wife was beggin' him to be patient. 'Think of Job,' says she.

Held Up Job as an Example

"'Certainly I'll think of Job,' says Andy. 'Didn't Job kick when he had them biles? When them Sabeens cleaned him out an' massacreed his fam'ly he stood it all right, of course, same as I'd stand it, if you got killed off. He braced himself against it like a man. But the biles was too much for him, an' that's what I'm gettin' right along—aggravatin', triflin', worryin', no-account biles. I'll be patient, too, when I've got suthin' to be patient about.'

"Well, it run like that right along. There wasn't anything special worth mentionin' happened to Andy, when you pinned him right down to it—accordin' to his tell, although he had what I'd call a run of tol'able hard luck.

"I reckon most folks, includin' Miz Ettinger, thought Andy 'd go down to his grave without ever showin' that stiff upper lip of his to Old Man Trouble, but when there was trouble sure enough an' big enough at last Andy faced it like a man.

"Not a wry face or a word questionin' the decrees of Providence. Not a groan or a tear. Miz. Ettinger was settin' with the tears runnin' down her cheeks an' her face as white as a linen rag, an' ever' oncet in a while she'd cry out, but Andy stood there like a rock.

"'What's done cain't be he'ped,' says he. 'It's a turrble thing, but weepin' won't do no good. Misfortunes come to all. We've jist nachally got to take what's sent us an' make the best of it.' That was all Andy ever said."

"What was it happened?" asked the storekeeper.

"The Johnstown flood," answered Hancock. "An' he bore up noble the time of the Indian famine. Of co'se they was both a right smart of a ways from Mizzoura, but it did Andy credit."

Most Common Skin Disease

A great medical authority says that eczema is the most important, most annoying and most common of all skin troubles; that one-third of all skin diseases are eczema in some form, and that proper treatment will always relieve and cure it. Sometimes it is called salt rheum, moist tetter and various other names. The best known treatment is to first stop the itching, and then proceed to heal up the sores. That is exactly what Cadum, the new remedy, does, and it acts so quickly that relief is felt as soon as it is applied. Try a 10-cent box, and if your trouble is eczema, Cadum will help you immediately. It is also good for redness, pimples, blotches, rash, scaly skin, roughness, chafings, acne, sores, ulcers eruptions, hives, tetter, itch, herpes, psoriasis, ringworm, etc.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

OVER in Brooklyn we took a hack, for we didn't know where to find the street, and were horrified when it turned out to be an alley lined with tenement houses, and could scarcely believe that a gentleman lived there, and, when we stopped in front of the number Sinclair had given, we couldn't think it was true. The door was wide open, and a woman and a man talked together on the stoop.

"Mr. Sinclair?" my husband asked.

The woman stared at us. "Are you his brother?"

"No, his best friend."

"Well," said the woman, "you're too late. He died yesterday."

It went all through me that it was my fault for being so hard and cruel.

We asked if we could go up-stairs.

"Yes, right up to his room on the next floor," the woman said.

The room was bare and poor. Poor Mr. Sinclair lay there in the coffin in the middle of the room, the gas turned low and the shades drawn. It was piercing, icy, dreadfully cold. There was nothing but his bed and bureau and a couple of chairs and a wash-stand—not even a trunk of clothes in the place.

My husband gazed at Mr. Sinclair for a long time. His face was thin and drawn, but quite peaceful. He didn't look to me as much like a dead man as he did that day on the "L" station platform. The woman, who had stayed in the room with us, said to us:

"He told me his brother would come on from Milwaukee, but no one has ever showed up. He owed me two months' rent."

"Why didn't you let his friends know?" my husband asked. He could hardly speak.

"Why, he told me he didn't have any freinds, sir, and I believed him. He never had any money, and sold all his clothes—his trunk, too."

I stood by my husband; I was afraid he would fall, shaking as he did, white as the dead man. He walked over to the bureau-drawers and opened them. Every one was empty except for a little packet which my husband took up. The woman didn't care. "Nothing of value," she kept saying. My husband put the envelope in his pocket defiantly, and the landlady seemed afraid of him.

"If you have robbed this man," Mr. Kirkland said, in a dreadful voice, "don't think to escape. I will have you put in the penitentiary for life."

"Robbed him! I haven't, indeed, sir; he owes me money. He hadn't many things, but what he did have he sold, and he wouldn't take anything from us—he was too proud."

"What do you mean?" my husband asked. "What kind of things do you speak of?"

Starved to Death

And she said, as if she were ashamed, "Why, food, and like that."

"Do you mean—?" my husband murmured, and the woman replied:

"He was often hungry—you may say he starved to death. That's what the doctor told us when the pneumonia set in."

My husband gripped the stand and cried out.

"My God! Sin!—Sin!" and he burst into tears. The woman slipped out here and left us, and after a little the quiet calmed my husband and he wiped his eyes and handed me the packet without a word. They were letters from my husband to Mr. Sinclair, written from Paris, and a little picture of me that I had given my husband and which he thought he had lost.

He didn't breathe a word of reproach to me, but, when he went back to the side of Mr. Sinclair's coffin, murmured, "This is a mission of peace, old man—a mission of peace!" And he said other things that I couldn't hear.

Down-stairs he made the arrangements with the woman, and paid her everything, and, in the elevated on the way home, under his breath he murmured:

"Starved to death! My God!" He turned to me and said, violently, "Think of it!—think of it!"

"No," I begged him, "don't—he wouldn't want us to. He didn't give any trouble to any one, and he wanted it that way."

He left me at the Fiftieth Street junction and said he wanted to walk in the Park, and I understood he wished to be alone and think, and, honestly, I didn't dare follow him. As it was, I went home perfectly used up and sick at heart. That was Sunday night, and I never saw or heard from my husband for three days.

A Wreck of Himself

During that wait Mrs. Howland, our landlady, came in to me and said:

"Mrs. Kirkland, I have been through the same mill; only my husband wasn't a gentleman and it was harder. Let me help you."

We went out together, she and I, and we went everywhere that either of us thought he might be. She wouldn't let me tell the police, and she made me understand that times like these come to every man who drinks as my husband did. I told them down at the office that he was ill.

At the end of the third day he came in and stood in the doorway, a wreck of himself—his eyes staring and his beard grown. I really only knew him by his voice.

"Just let me get to bed," he said, "and send for some black coffee and some cigarettes; will you be so good"

He was sick in bed a week, and got up feverish, nervous and shaking, and went down to his work like a man out of the hospital. I nursed him as one would a baby, and read the papers to him. He didn't show any desire to keep in touch with what was going on. He only wanted his attention held, that was all.

He went on like this week after wek, but his mind was so strong that he stood it perfectly wonderfully, and with a day or two of rest in our room he would be able to go back.

I never said anything. I never knew what to say. It was too sad to me, and I wasn't sure what would be the good of speaking to a man like Mr. Kirkland, a man so cultured and so clever—knowing the world and having travelled everywhere. He must have known all the things I could say, by heart. We never referred to it. In the daytime I used to think up all kinds of different advice to give him and things to suggest, but when he came in and wasn't himself, of course I couldn't speak then, and the day after I was too busy amusing him and reading to him and keeping up his spirits.

During his sickness he asked me, "Where's the picture of the Hebe we used to see dance in Erminie?"

I got out the photograph. He had me get out a lot more actresses' pictures which he had bought in Paris and London, and he looked them over, smoking, sitting up in bed, and he told me a lot of stories about the actresses and seemed quite carried back to his old life.

"I guess you like foreign travel pretty well," I remarked, and he answered sharply:

"Just as one likes the Sphinx, Esther! You confuse your values." But after a minute he added, "I never want to see the Continent again."

As to where my husband spent those dreadful three days he never told me, and he never referred to Mr. Sinclair by name. While he was sick Mr. Roxburg sent a man up to see him every day or so, and they talked together about some matters my husband had charge of, and I never was astonished—or I guess I had better say proud—as when I heard Mr. Kirkland

I got him sitting propped up by his pillows and a nice jacket on, and he had been shaved and looked thin but pretty well, and he talked to the man from Senator Roxburg so fast and authoritatively. It was about the silver question, and Senator Roxburg and Senator Brice and a lot of others were interested in it, and, when my husband had finished what he had to say, the man told him, "It's a pity you couldn't draft out what you have been saying, Mr. Kirkland."

And my husband laughed and said:

"For Roxburg to use? When I write down what I say I shall be in the Senate myself, Mr. Guffy."

I Just Didn't Know

I MERELY remarked "That's a lie!"
I didn't say any more.
I soon had a purple-green eye,
And was sprawling at length on the floor.
I didn't suppose he'd be sore
And deal me that cowardly blow,
Two teeth I can never restore.
I just didn't know.

The stock seemed a good thing to buy,
Nice seals the certificates bore,
The assays they showed me were high,
A point that I could not ignore.
My judgment I have to deplore
As later quotations will show.
The mine—well it ran out of ore.
I just didn't know.

The maiden was modest and shy,
A being to madly adore.
If asked, I would have to reply
She really was false to the core.
A ring that I gave her she wore,
Till one day her regular beau
Came down for a week at the shore.
I just didn't know.

L'ENVOI.

Such trials I've had by the score.
I've learned, but the process was slow.
I'm wise to most things, but before,
I just didn't know.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Ma Gives Aunt Cordelia a Lot of New Ideas for Her Ever Present Note Book

WHEN a woman has a guest she feels greatly indebted to the friend who will ask the guest how long she intends to stay. In this way the hostess gains information that assists her in preparing her entertainment timetable, which could not be otherwise obtained without embarrassment.

A caller asked this of Aunt Cordelia Updike, who is visiting at the home of Lysander John Appleton, and Mrs. Appleton was thus furnished the information she wanted, and by hanging around when Aunt Cordelia unpacked her trunk she was further enlightened.

When Daysey Mayme goes out of town to visit she always puts a party gown in her trunk, even though her errand may be to attend a funeral.

"There is no telling what may happen, and joy often follows grief," she will say, putting her party dress at the bottom; "I will at least be prepared."

Aunt Cordelia had no party clothes in her trunk, chiefly note books, and Mrs. Appleton gathered from this what kind of a time her guest expected.

"I would suggest to you," said Mrs. Appleton, "that instead of preparing papers on sights of historic interest, to read before your literary club, you take down notes of what you hear me say, and elaborate them into articles for the women's magazines.

Woman Much Maligned

"Woman has been maligned in the press so often you could stir up the sisterhood all over the world by coming to her defence. For instance, who in the world is as economical as woman, and who gets so little credit?

"All my life I have been the soul of economy and never got credit. There was never a night I didn't save the little dab of potatoes left from dinner, and I will wager there isn't a housewife in this broad land who hasn't a dab of cold potatoes in her ice box at this minute. True, we always save this dab of cold potatoes over night only to throw it out next morning, but don't we save it? And do the men give us credit? No!

"And women are so misunderstood. If a woman in dire poverty is given a cow and trades it for a cabinet organ, every man abuses her; but I contend she is right. There is no uplift in the presence of a cow, and there is in a cabinet organ, and she has the future of her children to consider. If any of her children are destined to become great organists, would that talent develop in keeping the cow?

The Danger of a Double Life

"Not enough is written in the magazines warning wives about this double life the men lead. At one time Lysander John kept a dollar for himself out of his week's wages, and after deliberate reflection and long conferences with other wives I reduced it to twenty-five. Why? Because, as long as he had a dollar a week to spend, I couldn't be sure he wasn't leading a double life. Men are weak, and it is the wife's duty to guard her husband against temptation.

"Just keep your notebook handy," concluded Mrs. Appleton to her guest. "I can furnish you with things to write more interesting than these tablets marking where Washington stood, slept or used his fountain pen."

Claude and the cowboys have Desmond in their power for the present, but there's a bunch of wild men in the distance who want to rescue their old pal. Fortunately, the Deadwood coach from the Wild West Show is passing by, and the villain is forced to climb in. It ought to be a cinch now to get him away from his would-be rescuers.

When the coach comes to the bridge over the Oogli-Googli River Desmond's captors are in a quandary. If they go ahead, the wild men will chop the bridge from under them, and if they stay where they are they will have a hard fight on their hands. The cowboys wouldn't object to that in the least, only they don't want Rosamond to get hurt.

The only way on of the dilemma is to send Claude and Rosamond to the other shore over the horses' heads, while the cowboys stay in the coach and defend the bridge. At the last moment Claude suggests that he take Desmond with him, so that the villain will not be in anybody's way during the fight. Claude will be sorry for that, mark our words.

Claude thinks just because he has the villain walking in front of him with his hands tied behind his back, that the latter will not be able to start anything, but that is where our hero makes a sad mistake. A clever and resourceful crook like Desperate Desmond is never so dangerous as when he seems to be up against it good and hard.

If you were watching closely in that last picture, you noticed that Desmond dropped his cigarette, and you may be very sure he did not do it accidentally. His idea was to stampede the horses, and you see for yourself he has succeeded. Claude, Rosamond and Desmond are all thrown from the backs of the horses into the raging waters below.

There goes the Deadwood stage over the bridge, and all Claude's friends are in it. The wild men are coming to the rescue of Desperate Desmond, and they may drag Claude and Rosamond out also, but if they do it will be only to devise some new torture for the lovers. This thrilling and instructive narrative will be continued in to-morrow's pictures.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Helen Is Still Ill, and Her Father Telegraphs for Warren

WARREN E. CURTIS, State street,
Boston, Mass.
Helen very ill. Come at once.
M. G. ALLEN.

THIS was the telegram which Helen's father, Dr. Allen, had sent. And he had sent it without Helen's knowledge. For, although she had now been ill, very ill, for over a week, she still persistently refused to let them send for Warren.

Only she knew the cause of her illness—that midnight walk in the yard with only her bedroom slippers and a light wrap over her nightgown.

And when she had come in, and was feeling her way through the hall in the dark, her groping hand had touched the telephone. And at that moment had come the wild impulse to call up Warren in Boston. She did not stop to think of the cost—nor of anything except that she would end her suspense!

For over half an hour she had stood there, shivering in the dark until Central could make the connection. And then, at last, she had heard Warren's faint "Hello!" And when she asked wildly—what was the matter—why hadn't he written—why hadn't she heard from him for so long—he had cut her off, furious that she should have gone to the expense of this long distance call.

Fell Sobbing on the Floor

And she had fallen sobbing on the hall floor beneath the telephone, and crouched there in the dark, too wretched to move. When, at length, she groped her way up the stairs, she had thrown herself on the bed by the open window, still in the dew drenched gown.

The next morning she had had a blinding headache and a high fever. And yet she had risen with the determination to go down to the telephone office and pay for her midnight call to Boston, so it would not be put on her father's bill. They would, then, never know that she had been desperate enough to try to reach Warren in this way. If she could only go before breakfast before anyone saw her and realized how ill she was!

She had slipped on her hat and coat and hurried down stairs, calling out to her mother, who was in the dining room.

"I'm going for a little walk before breakfast. I'll be back in fifteen or twenty minutes."

But, as she started out she had met her father on the porch. In one glance he had seen something was wrong.

"Why, Helen, what's the matter?"

"Nothing, only I didn't sleep very well, and I thought I'd go for a walk before breakfast."

"But you're sick! You're not able to go out. Come here and let me see you."

"Oh, no; I'll feel better when I get a little air."

But he had taken one of her hands and looked at her closely. Then he had drawn her into the sitting room, made her take off her hat and coat and lie down.

Half an hour later she had been in the throes of a violent chill. He had put her to bed and installed her mother as nurse. Before night her fever had been 104.

The next day she had been worse. And when he had wanted to send for Warren—she had refused to let him. It was not until now, the eighth day of her illness, that he had telegraphed Warren without her knowledge.

He had sent the message about seven that morning. At 3 o'clock came this reply:

Dr. M. G. Allen, Cartersfown, Mo.:
Is my coming imperative? Almost impossible to leave now. Wire if condition is critical.
WARREN E. CURTIS.

With a muttered oath, Dr. Allen gazed at the telegram in his hand. That Helen's husband should have sent such an answer! Hurriedly he wrote this reply:

Warren E. Curtis, —— State street,
Boston, Mass.:
Helen critically ill. Your place is here. Drop everything. Come.
M. G. ALLEN.

Mrs. Allen came in just then and saw the crumpled telegram on the table before him.

"From Warren?" tremulously, as she picked it up.

He nodded.

She read it and laid it down with a sigh. "I was afraid so. Can't you see that's why she didn't want you to send for him."

"The Man's a Brute," He Said

"Then the man's a brute. No decent man would refuse to come to his wife under such circumstances."

"Martin, I'm afraid"—Mrs. Allen hesitated. "I'm afraid he thinks Helen is making you believe she's more ill than she is—just so you will send for him."

"But how—why on earth should he think that?"

"Of course, I may be wrong, but I can't help but feel that is what he thinks, and he is very obstinate and unyielding when once he gets a fixed idea. I saw that in the few weeks I was with them. And that is one of the reasons why he makes Helen so unhappy—he is so hard, so inflexible."

Dr. Allen frowned anxiously. "Well, there's no use discussing that now. When she gets well will be time enough for that. But he's got to help us get her well. And I believe he can do more than we can. Where's Tom? I want to send this telegram at once."

"Why, you just sent him for the 3 o'clock mail," answered Mrs. Allen.

"Oh, yes; that's so. Here he is now."

Tom, their man of all work, came in now with the mail. The doctor handed him the message.

"Take this to the telegraph office right away. Have it charged to me?"

The Telephone Secret Out

Mrs. Allen had gone back to the darkened sick room where Helen lay with closed eyes and feverishly flushed face.

The doctor paced up and down the sitting room, his brows knit. Then, noticing the mail Tom had laid on the table, he absently looked it over. This was the first of the month, and there were a number of bills. As he tore open one from the local telephone company he was amazed to find an item for $6.50 long distance service to Boston, May 25, 11:45 p. m.

He gazed at it in astonishment. There must be some mistake. And then flashed the thought—could it be Helen? The night of May 25th! And it was the morning after that that Helen had been taken ill.

Just then Mrs. Allen passed the door.

"Mother, come here a moment," handing her a telephone bill. Do you know anything about this long distance message to Boston at midnight, May 25th? That was the night before Helen was taken ill. Could she have called up Warren then?"

A startled look crossed Mrs. Allen's face. "Oh, that explains it—and I thought it was a dream."

"Thought what was a dream?"

"Why, I know now that I heard Helen talking to Warren over the telephone. I must have been half asleep, for I heard only vaguely—'Warren—Warren! Why haven't you written? What has been the matter?' I remembered it the next morning, but thought, of course, I had dreamed it."

"Then that must have been why she wanted to go out so early that morning. She wanted to pay for this Boston call so we would not know. You remember how she insisted on going even though she was hardly able to stand?"

Mrs. Allen nodded. "Yes, I remember, and I'm afraid our Helen has been very unhappy, more unhappy than we know. Oh, I fear there's many things in her married life that we do not know."

Beauty Hints.

To the Beauty Editor: Can you tell me of any harmless way to increase the bust? I do not want any more flesh on the hips or other parts of my body, but I am so flat-chested I would try anything you thought would give me even two or three inches more development. ANNA R.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a prescription put up by The Dr. Kelly Co., especially for small and undeveloped breasts. It is the discovery of a woman physician whose practice was largely among her own sex, and in most cases increases the bust measure four to six inches in a month. Send 10c to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 27 F. B., Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment without charge. This is said to be of great value in cases of arrested development of the bust and will give a full, beautiful form without anyone knowing that the treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby had been weaned the breasts became flabby and shrunken, but the use of Dr. Kelly's prescription made them full and firm. Do not use pads or bust forms, as they never look natural and have a bad effect upon the general health. Neither would I recommend ordinary flesh builders or tonics, as they increase the hips and limbs, and with the present styles the form should be slender everywhere except a generously developed bust.

To the Beauty Editor:
How can I restore the youthful color and looks of my hair? It is getting gray and streaked and makes me look much older than I am.
Mrs. G. P. W.

Many women ask me for some practical and safe way to restore the color of their hair, and my invariable answer is to get 50c or $1.00 worth of Queen gray hair restorer from Houghton & Dutton's or Jaynes Drug Stores. It is perfectly harmless, restores the natural color with one application, leaves the hair soft and fluffy, and its use cannot

FURNEAUX himself was then, for the second time that week, at Mrs. Marsh's lodging in Portchester Gardens in secret and urgent talk with Rosalind.

"You will think that I am always hunting you down, Miss Marsh," he said genially, on entering the room.

"You know best how to describe your profession," she murmured a little bitterly, for his parting shot at their last meeting had struck deep.

"But this time I come more definitely on business," he said, seating himself uninvited, which was a strange thing for Furneaux to do, since he was a gentleman by birth and in manners, 'and as I am in a whirl of occupation just now, I will come at once to the point."

"To say 'I will come at once to the point' is to put off coming to it—for while you are saying it——"

"True. The world uses too many words——"

"It is a round world—hence its slowness in coming to a point."

"I take the hint. Yet you leave me rather breathless."

"Pray tell me why, Inspector Furneaux."

"For admiration of so quick and witty a lady. But I shall make you dumb by what I am going to suggest to-day. I want to turn into a detective——"

"It is a point, then. You want me to be sharp?"

"You are already that. The question is, what effect did what I last said have upon your mind?"

"About your finding the blood-spotted clothes in Mr. Osborne's trunk?" she asked, looking down at his tired and worn face from her superior height, and suddenly moved to listen to him attentively.

"Well, it was somewhat astounding at first. In fact, it sounded almost convincing. But then, I had already believed in Mr. Osborne's innocence in this matter. Nor am I over-easily shaken, I think, in my convictions. If he confessed his guilt to me, then I would believe—but not otherwise."

"Good," said Furneaux, "you have said that well, though I am sure he does not deserve it. Anyhow, since you persist in believing in his innocence, you must also believe that every new truth must be in his favor, and so may be willing to turn yourself into the detective I suggested. . . . You have, I think, a servant here named Pauline Dessaulx?"

This girl he had been seeking for some time, and had been gladly surprised to have her open the door to him on the day of his first visit to Rosalind. "She did not know me," he explained, "but I have twice seen her in the streets with her former mistress. Do you know who that mistress was? Rose de Bercy!"

Rosalind Started

Rosalind started as though a whip had cracked across her shoulders. She even turned around, looked at the door, tested it by the handle to see if it was closed, and stood with her back to it. Furneaux seemingly ignored her agitation.

"Now, you were at the inquest, Miss Marsh," he said. "You heard the description given by Miss Prout of the Saracen dagger missing from Mr. Osborne's museum—the dagger with which the crime was probably committed. Well, I want to get that into my hands. It is lying in Pauline Dessaulx's trunk, and I ask you to secure it for me."

"In Pauline's trunk," Rosalind repeated after him, quite too dazed in her astonishment to realize the marvels that this queer little man was telling her.

"To be quite accurate," he continued, "I am not altogether sure of what I say. But that is where it should be, in her trunk; and with it you should find a second dagger, or knife, which I am also anxious to obtain; and if you happen to come across a little book, a diary, with a blue morocco cover, I shall be extremely pleased to lay my hand on it."

"How can you possibly know all this?" Rosalind asked, her eyes wide open with wonder now, and forgetful, for the moment, of the pain he had caused her.

"Going up and down in the earth, like Satan, and then sitting and thinking of it," he said, with a quick turn of mordant humor. "But is it a bargain, now? Of course, I could easily pounce upon the girl's trunk myself; but I want the objects to be stolen from her, since I don't wish to have her frightened—not quite yet."

"Do you, then, suspect this girl of having—of being—the guilty hand, Inspector Furneaux?" asked Rosalind, her very soul aghast at the notion.

"I have already intimated to you the person who is open to suspicion," answered Furneaux promptly, "a man, not a woman—though, if you find these objects in the girl's trunk, that may lighten the suspicon against the man."

A gleam appeared one instant in his eyes, and died out as quickly, but this time Rosalind saw it. She pulled a chair close to him and sat down, her fingers clasped tightly over her right knee—eager to serve, to help. But, then, to steal, to pry into a servant's boxes, that was not a nice action. And this Pauline Dessaulx was a girl who had interested her, had shown a singular liking for her.

She mentioned her qualms.

"At the bidding of the police," urged Furneaux—"in the interests of justice—to serve a possibly innocent man, who is also a friend—surely that is something."

"I might have been able to do it yesterday," murmured Rosalind, distraught, "but she is better to-day. I will tell you. For two days the girl has been ill—in a kind of hysteria or nervous collapse—a species of neurosis, I think—altogether abnormal and strange.

"I—you may as well know—wrote a letter to Mr. Osborne on the day you first came, a little before you came. I gave it to her to post—she may have seen the address. Then you appeared. After you were gone, I sent him a telegram, also by Pauline's hand, telling him not to read my letter——"

"Ah, you see you did believe that what I told you proved his guilt——"

"Hear me * * * No, I did not believe that. But—you had impressed me with the fact that Mr. Osborne has been, may have been, already sufficiently successful in attracting the sympathies of young ladies.

"I had been at the inquest—I had seen there in the box his exquisite secretary, of whose perfect ways of acting you gave me some knowledge that day, and I thought it might be rash of me to seem to be in rivalry with so charming a lady. Now you see my motive—I am often frank. So, when you were gone, I sent the telegram forbidding the reading of my letter; and the next morning I received a very brief note from Mr. Osborne saying that the letter was awaiting my wishes unopened."

"How did he know your address, if he did not open the letter?" asked Furneaux.

Rosalind started like a child caught in a fault. She was so agitated that she had not asked herself that question. As a matter of fact, it was Hylda Prout, having tracked Rosalind from Waterloo, who had given Osborne the address for her own reasons: Hylda had told Osborne, on hearing his fretful exclamation of annoyance, that she knew the address of a Miss Marsh from an old gentleman who had apparently come up from Tormouth with him and her, and had called to see Osborne when Osborne was out.

"He got the address from some source, I don't know what," Rosalind said, with a rather wondering gaze at Furneaux's face, "but the point is, that the girl, Pauline, saw my letter to him, and the telegram; and last night, coming home from an outing in quite a broken-down and enfeebled state, she said to me with tears in her eyes: 'Oh, he is innocent! Oh, do not judge him harshly, Miss Marsh! Oh, it was not he who did it!' and much more of that sort.

"Then she collapsed and began to scream and kick, was got to bed, and a doctor sent for, who said that she had an attack of neurasthenia due to mental strain. And I was sitting by her bedside quite a long while, so that I might then—if I had known—. But I think she is better to-day."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Manicure Lady

It Was Awful the Way the Song Writer Murdered the Music.

"GEORGE," said the Manicure Lady, "I think it is terrible when a young married couple don't get along good together. Especially if they have a baby in the house."

"Lots of them don't get along any too good," admitted the Head Barber, peeking stealthily at a scratch on his right hand, "but somehow they always make up in time and everything goes along. That's all there is to life anyhow, I guess—just going along. Even when married folks ain't fighting with each other they are fighting with the world, fighting for existence. I got to kick in to-morrow with $30 rent, and it's going to leave me as clean as a cake of soap."

"Oh, well, struggles for existence is different than what I mean," said the Manicure Lady. "It ain't so bad to buck Fate, and folks that can't afford to have fires gets used to being cold and eating canned things. But when a young couple that ought to be everything in the world to each other—I think all couples ought to—starts in throwing things at each other, verbal and utensil, it is really a pity, George.

"We had company of that description to the house last night. Brother Wilfred has been telling me for a long time about a young song writer that he has met. 'He's a swell kid, and he has a swell wife, because he said so,' Wilfred kept telling us. And I have invited him up to the house some night for dinner. They have a little boy four years old.'

"The old gent didn't warm up to the suggestion much, George, because brother is so far back with his board money that the old gent is thinking of calling it the first of the year and beginning all over again; but mother is that warm hearted that she said 'certainly,' and so, last night, up comes the song writing wonder and his wife, and their young song writer, aged four.

"None of us took to the song writer, especially the old gent. He was one of them loud young hicks that couldn't make no impression on anybody except Wilfred. Anybody can make an impression on that boob brother of mine, George. This one was the limit. I have met a lot of regular song writers in my day, and some of them are the salt of the earth.

"Men like Billy Jerome and Eddie Madden and Harry Williams are one kind of song writers clever and dandy any way you take them, George.

"This young hick writer that poor Wilfred introduced was something terrible, and you don't know, George, how sorry I felt for his poor wife. She was real sweet, too, and I think she had a fine sense of humor before he took all the laughs out of her with his swell-headed ways.

"The minute he got into the family circle I could see the old gent freezing up. The old gent don't go much on poetry of any kind, even the best. You know how all them old Scotchmen is, George. They think that Bobbie Burns wrote all the good stuff and that Dante should have been sent up the river for life. Anyhow, the first ballad of his own that the young song writer sang—and he sang it off key—the old man was his enemy for life.

"'Please, dear,' said his little wife, 'don't sing your songs to-night. You have a cold.' We could all see that she had enough breeding and class to be embarrassed, but much good it did her. That wart of a husband of hers shut her up with a cross sentence and a crosser look, and kept on singing his ballads.

"I couldn't help thinking how sad the future of his family would be, George. What if his kid should be a song writer, too, when he grows up—that kind of a song writer?"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WAIT TILL HE WRITES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

About three months ago I met a young man at an afternoon dance. It was love at first sight. His correspondence was regular, until about four weeks ago he stopped writing entirely.

Now my friends advise me to write and find out what is the matter. I hate to do this, as I do not want him to think that I am running after him. I have finaly decided to write to you and ask your opinion. You have helped other girls to do the right thing, and you may help me.

R. K. S. D.

THE young man will write without any word from you if his love is sincere. He may have a reason, of which you are not aware, for his attitude, and if not, his behavior has been ungentlemanly and he is not worthy of your affection.

Remember that a girl in writing a man under these circumstances makes an advance which is often misunderstood and lowers herself in the eyes of the man.

EMBARRASSING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am in an embarrassing position and would be thankful to you for a little advice.

I met a young lady some time ago at a dance, and afterward took her to various places of amusement. I was introduced to her sister, and it was a case of love at first sight.

I would like to ask her to a theatre, but I do not want to offend the first sister.

How should I go about it?

J. P. F.

NO situation could be more desperate, and it is very difficult to advise you in this matter.

You must make up your mind to treat both of these girls as friends until you are perfectly certain which one you love.

You might avoid going to the theatre or ask both of them to go with you. After you have known them for some time, and if you still feel as you do now, there is only one thing to do. Explain the situation to the first sister, and if your conduct during the whole of this time has been absolutely fair and just she will be able to understand and give in to her sister.

Anty Drudge Tells How to Do "Dry Cleaning" at Home.

His Wife—"Come out from under there, George! Your clothes will be all covered with grease again and you know it won't come off. We'll walk home."

Anty Drudge—"Let him fix it, Dearie; and don't fear the grease. Fels-Naptha will take out all the grease spots and stains. It's as good for 'dry cleaning' garments as it is for washing clothes."

Where there's a will there's a way.

But, usually, only one way.

Fels-Naptha is the way through which you can free yourself from the drudgery of the old-fashioned washday—if you will.

What is that drudgery?

You know.

Boiling clothes, making fires, hard rubbing.

Fels-Naptha lops it all off, takes it out of your washday program.

Fels-Naptha itself does all the work that you yourself would have to do in the roundabout way, summer or winter.

And it does it in cool or lukewarm water, without hot fire, without nauseous suds or steam in the house, without hard rubbing.

Have you the will to cut loose from the old ways—to free yourself from this drudgery?

Follow the easy directions on the back of the red and green wrapper.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS GAIN AFTER OPENING

NEW YORK, June 7.—Pressure was exerted against the important speculative issues in the stock market following the opening to-day as a result of the prominence given to the possibility of criminal prosecution of officers of the U. S. Steel Corporation by the government. Steel common opened ½ off and the preferred was unchanged but the disturbing influence of this talk was felt throughout the list. Other issues showed a like tendency, but at the end of the first fifteen minutes a decidedly better tone prevailed.

American Tobacco continued to show strength upon the curb market, opening four points above last night's close and eighteen points higher than the opening yesterday morning. There was good demand for American Tobacco and traders predicted that the bottom had been touched. The rains proved a favorable factor because of the effect upon crops.

Coppers continued to show a good initial tone. Amalgamated Copper was up ⅛ and Amer. Smelting up ¼. The following were off: Reading ⅛, U. P. ⅛, Can. Pac. ⅛, Atch. ⅛, B. R. T. ⅛, Lehigh Valley ⅛, Southern Ry. pf. ⅛ and B. & O. ⅛. Penna., Southern Pac. and Mo. Pac. were unchanged.

The curb market opened strong. The London market was narrow with Americans irregular and showing fractional changes. Mexicans showed a better tendency.

Summer Cottages

$125

It seems hardly possible, yet it is true, that we can build you a Portable Cottage, size 12 ft. by 18ft., with a Porch and little Kitchenette, for the sum of $125. The material is of the best quality and we give a ten-year guarantee with every house. If you desire a larger house similar to the illustration, the prices range from $245 upward. These are real houses, built by our Standard Unit System, which saves over one-third material and labor. If you are interested, drop us a line to-day. Don't merely ask for a catalogue—our office boy can send you that—but tell us what you want and we will personally advise you. We are prepared to execute promptly and well all kinds of Construction Work.

"Johnny, Run Up and Change Your Clothes"
And
"Susie, Run Up and Change Your Dress"

So Uncle Sam Speaks to the Bad Little Standard Oil Boy and the Bad Little Tobacco Trust Girl. They Will Change Their Clothes. What Then?

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

Two of Uncle Sam's naughty little children were led by the ear before the Supreme Court. One was little Johnnie Oil Trust and the other was little Susie Tobacco Trust.

Each in turn was told that the naughty trust must "dissolve."

Our readers are interested in trust matters, in magnificent Supreme Court decisions, in overwhelming "mastery of the trusts and assertion of the rights of the people," etc., etc.

Some readers, probably, are wondering what the whole thing means.

You have heard an angry father say to little Johnnie, who has got himself dirty in the mud, "Johnnie, run upstairs and change your clothes." And you have heard the same dignified, angry authority say to grimy little Susie, "Susie, run up stairs and change your dress."

Johnnie runs upstairs and changes; Susie runs upstairs and changes; both come down looking neat and clean. They get a kiss on the forehead, run out to play as happy as ever, and before long they are just as dirty as before.

And, dear readers, the scene which shows you little Johnnie and little Susie is just the scene that took place the other day in the United States Supreme Court. The Standard Oil Trust and the Tobacco Trust, naughty little industrial Johnnie and Susie, were told to run away and change their corporation clothes and come back presently, looking neat and clean, dressed up in a different corporation suit.

There is no doubt that little Standard Oil Johnnie and little Tobacco Trust Susie expected something of this kind. There is little doubt that they had already made their plans for getting a change of clothing. By and by you will see them dressed up differently, but they will still be little Standard Oil Johnnie and little Tobacco Trust Susie. And after a while things will be just about as they were before —and it won't be a long while.

In what way will the public gain, in what way will monopoly be restricted? NOT AT ALL that we can see.

The time will soon come when this effort of the Supreme Court to do something—without really doing anything—will be generally looked upon as one of the most futile undertakings in all the history of judicial decisions.

The Standard Oil, with the aid of an able lawyer, will be divided into different companies, all obeying the same supreme trust orders.

The Tobacco company, one of our biggest trusts, though changed in name, will still control the tobacco business of the United States and the tobacco stores of the United States—it WILL ACTUALLY OWN THE TOBACCO BUSINESS JUST AS THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY WILL OWN THE OIL BUSINESS.

It matters not how the trusts may divide, subdivide or change their faces to appease public opinion and obey literally the order of the court, they will remain LITERALLY THE SAME POWERFUL TRUSTS.

The fact is, and the people and the judges may as well understand it, that great industrial organizations HAVE COME TO STAY.

The freight and passenger carrying of the world used to be done by tens of thousands of different stage coaches, drawn by different teams of horses, each team with its owner, or sometimes some one coach line owned by one man.

No stage coach line of the old days could draw as much in a week as one single big freight locomotive will draw in a day.

The railroad wiped away the little competitive stage coach lines forever, and no Supreme Court order telling the railroad to go and divide itself up into stage coaches could have any real effect.

The great railroad combinations are making one out of many railroads, just as the railroad locomotive made one out of many stage coaches. Combination is bound to prevail.

The great businesses of the country are becoming more and more organized. Competition is replaced and destroyed by organization.

And if business were conducted honestly, legally and on a fair basis of profit, fair to labor, fair to organizing brains and fair to the consumer, NOTHING IN THE WORLD COULD BE BETTER FOR THE ENTIRE NATION THAN GREAT ORGANIZATION.

Good or bad, great organizations will continue to exist. No lawmaking body, no Supreme Court, will overcome the irresistible tendencies of the industry of a nation. The Supreme Court judges are handsome to look at, dignified, earnest and honest beyond a doubt. But they can no more stand against a national industrial movement than against the law of gravitation.

As well might a dignified old row of elms oppose the onward march of a big city.

The business of the people is to realize things AS THEY ARE.

Organizations will continue, competition will be more and more eliminated—and in the end that will be an excellent thing. What's the use of having a thousand managers if ONE can do the work? What's the use of having 50,000 drummers if none is necessary?

What's the use of having any man doing work that is not productive, work that isn't NECESSARY?

Better eliminate the middle man, eliminate the unnecessary, do away with the parasites, and HAVE EVERYBODY ENGAGED IN SOME ACTUAL USEFUL LABOR.

People also must remember that the country cannot, however, indefinitely permit individuals at the head of great monopolies to be the uncontrolled rulers and despots of the land.

Prices have got to be regulated. It doesn't do any good to tell the Standard Oil people to change into fifteen companies and then have the fifteen companies all selling at prices higher than the present prices. It doesn't do any good to order the tobacco company to become twenty companies instead of one.

The people must have the power to prevent EXTORTION.

They must organize their courts and their lawmaking body upon a common sense realization of the fact that our nation is no longer a nation of farmers, of soldiers and of little business men, but is primarily a nation of human beings depending on the powerful concentrated organization of industry.

It doesn't do any good to say "YOU are a bad little boy; go and change your shoes and stockings."

You must tell the trust just exactly what he can do, what he MUST do, regardless of his corporation suit of clothes.

Prices, wages, profits, have got to be regulated by the people. And it will take more than a decision on "reasonble" or unreasonable restraint of trade to do that.

The real work of protecting the consumer, the rights of the workingman and the rights of the intelligent organizer and thinker is still to be done in this country.

Two bad little trust boys have been sent upstairs to comb their hair and change their clothes—but nothing has been changed.

THE ASSASSINATION OF THE PUBLIC OPINION BILL

The People Will Not Stand Such Defiance of Platform Pledges Much Longer. The Initiative and the Referendum Are Surely Coming

The bill which would have given to the citizens of Massachusetts the right to express their opinion upon important matters of legislation pending in the Legislature has been foully assassinated by a parliamentary trick of ELEVEN CONSPIRATORS IN THE SENATE.

For years the most public-spirited citizens of the Commonwealth have attempted to place among our statutes a law by which the people of the State might be consulted on matters concerning which they wish to express an opinion and to instruct their representatives.

Our constitution expressly provides that the people shall HAVE A RIGHT to instruct their representatives, and in the early days of this Commonwealth the people DID instruct their representatives, and when men like Samuel Adams, John Hancock and John Adams—the great patriots of Massachusetts—were her law makers, the people by a resolution declared that, in adopting the constitution, it should be understood that they reserved the right to instruct their representatives.

By long years of insidious judicial legislation and the assumption by the Legislature of an independence of the will of the people which is not justified either by the language or the spirit or the history of the constitution, it has come to pass that men are to-day found DENYING THE OBLIGATION of the Legislature to canvass the opinion of the people on matters of great public moment.

When the constitution was framed, we were a government of town meetings and the opinion of the voters could be easily collected at these town meetings, where the citizens could assemble and "petition the Legislature for redress of grievances." The growth of our population has rendered this method cumbersome and ineffective. There remains but one way of collecting the will of the whole people in the State—that way is by ballot at the regular election or at a special election.

When the effectiveness of the town meetings to guide general legislation began to wane, it was attempted to supplement the town meeting with party platforms, in which the party candidates were PLEDGED to certain policies of legislation, and the voters at the election, IN THEORY, determined the ensuing legislative policy by the election of the candidates pledged to the particular platform which the voters preferred.

But this has proved to be an ineffective substitute for the direct vote of the old town meeting. Party bosses have written the platforms and they often do not contain any of the declarations of policies and principles which the people wish to pass upon; or those policies and principles are so vaguely stated that a dishonest legislator is too often able to VIOLATE the spirit and the intent of the platform without violating its expressed letter.

In recent years the power and the boldness of the Special Interests have grown so great that, on questions which affect them vitally, they have been able to command the downright defiance by the legislators of their party platforms.

In New York the machines of both parties maintain their power by means of a barbarous election law which permits all kinds of fraud and corruption.

The people demanded a direct nomination law. First the Republican party platform declared for it and when its candidates were elected they repudiated it.

Then last Fall the Democratic party platform declared for it, and now, under the control of Tammany's Murphy, the Democratic members of the Legislature are holding THEIR platform pledges in open defiance.

In New Hampshire the Democratic platform pledged the Democratic candidates to the Federal Income Tax and five Democratic senators VIOLATED THEIR PLEDGES and killed the measure. Later some of them were discovered at a hotel, with the attorney for the Boston & Maine Railroad, being privately regaled amid bottles of wine by professional female dancers and entertainers imported from Providence, Rhode Island.

In Maine last Fall the Democratic party pledged itself to pass the Income Tax and the Democratic Senate promptly proceeded to violate the party honor by rejecting the Income Tax and it was only saved by the firmness of the Democratic Governor.

These are only a FEW instances in NEIGHBORING States in the LAST FEW MONTHS of the utter failure of our representative system of government to be a government by and for the people.

Now in Massachusetts ELEVEN Senatorial conspirators in a body of FORTY members meet on a Friday afternoon, when the Senate is thinly attended, and reconsider a vote by which the Public Opinion Bill passed the Senate on the day before; and then by a series of parliamentary juggling proceed to murder the bill.

The House, with two hundred and forty members, had passed it ALMOST UNANIMOUSLY and the Senate at a full meeting had passed it on the day before.

Thus eleven insignificant TRICKSTERS, in a Legislature of two hundred and eighty members, were able to defeat a measure which would have given the people a right to express their opinion on great questions that affect their welfare.

More than nineteen hundred years ago Caesar wrote "The Gauls were ONCE powerful in war." Some foreign observer might now well write, "The people were ONCE powerful in America."

But though we have lost our grip, we have not lost our strength. We simply have not made up our minds where to TAKE HOLD again. In the West we are taking hold of the Initiative and Referendum and it is working splendidly. The Public Opinion Bill was a mild experiment in the Referendum.

Direct legislation in the form of the Initiative and the Referendum is SURELY COMING. If Massachusetts is prevented from taking it in a homoeopathic dose, like the Public Opinion Bill, then she will take it in one big dose.
